The Mighty Beast—Gone.
The Chain Store, Here.
Desert Sand to World News.
48 Partners.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.

THE world changes when you come through the Cajon Pass, gateway to Southern California, from the high desert east of the mountains.

On the desert, with room for a thousand cities, you see a dozen men, watching their alfalfa, long trains rolling by eastward and westward.

YOU climb 1,400 feet to the top of the pass, which is 4,500 feet high, passing the wonderful Verde ranch, with innumerable artesian wells spouting millions of gallons of water, 2,900 feet above sea level.

THROUGH the pass, the road leads by San Bernardino, where Mormons from Australia settled long years ago and were visited by Mormons from Salt Lake City, coming in their slow ox carts.

On ancient graveyard monuments you may read that so and so, faithful Mormon, lies buried, slain by a mighty beast.

The Cajon Pass was frequented by big grizzly bears in those old days, the mighty beasts worried and killed many. Now they are gone, and real estate developments replace them.

A LITTLE lower down and you are among the orange groves and find people with a worry different from the grizzly bear worry.

The Luckeys, husband and wife, of whom you buy oranges, lemons, grape fruit, avocados, at the roadside, never saw a grizzly.

But they do see great chain stores going direct to the groves buying oranges, selling at retail, cutting prices, cutting off the little middle man.

One well managed chain store can do more damage to little people than ten thousand grizzlies.

THREE hours after leaving the desert, its coyotes, lynxes, jack rabbits and lizards, you land in this city, on its way to two million population. And all the news of the world shouts at you on the street corners.

TODAY, some one attempted to murder Ortiz Rubio, new Mexican president.

He had just concluded his inauguration ceremonies, expressing warm friendship for the United States, urging Mexico's progress as "a progressive, modern power through development of natural resources."

It is fortunate for Mexico that the would-be assassin's six shots went wild.

WALL STREET sends cheerful news. Somebody bought four million shares and more, an increase of more than 1,000,000 shares over yesterday. Prices went higher.

Already the little fish are biting again.

A LOCAL editor in the East, kind enough to print this column in his independent newspaper, asks, "Why do you write so much about California?" The answer is "Because I am in California."

There should be no local jealousies in America.

Every state from Florida to Washington is interested in California. And California is interested in every one of the forty-eight states.

The prosperity of every state depends on the prosperity of all the others.

THERE are about 5,000,000 people in California now, many of them spending money accumulated by hard work. They all buy goods. Every state in the Union has "FREE TRADE WITH CALIFORNIA" and California has free trade with every other state.

What would European nations give for such a condition?

WE SHOULD appreciate our blessings and thank Heaven when we hear good news from any part of America.

IN THE sixteenth century the old Spanish conquistador, Hernan Cortes, brought to Mexico City a beautiful statue of the Virgin holding in her arms the Infant Jesus, and wearing a crown of gold and precious stones, dressed in costly robes.

The Christian religion conquered the ancient Aztecs, and, appropriately, the statue of the Virgin was placed upon an Aztec pyramid. Each religion as it wins replaces the other.

THUS in Constantinople the Turks took possession and tore the cross from the top of the beautiful Church of St. Sophia, putting the crescent in its place.

Now news comes from Mexico City that vandals have climbed the Aztec pyramid, stripping from the statue of the Virgin the golden crown, jewels and beautiful robes, even taking the figure of the Infant Jesus. Many of the pious will wonder there was no stroke of lightning to slay the vandals and protect the statue.

The thieves certainly will not be happy in possession of their loot.

RUSSIA, which deserves credit for trying, wants to make everybody as nearly as possible alike, and seeks to standardize

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Hoover Law Enforcement Commission's "juryless trial" plan to end congestion in Federal Courts aroused both drys and liberals of the Christopherson House Judiciary Sub-Committee today, who charged the plan was full of "jokers."

Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard Law School, who spoke for the commission, suggested some amendments to meet objections, but others were immediately raised.

Pound said the "juryless trial" plan was evolved "to save the dignity of the courts." He said the federal judges had been forced to hold "bargain days" and "cafeteria courts" to clear congestion, and that consequently people were losing their respect for the law.

"CLUB" PERIL ATTACKED

Admitting that the Jones law, providing a maximum prohibition case sentence of five years and $10,000 fine, was a formidable obstacle to the commission's plan, Dean Pound answered for himself and Chairman George W. Wickersham, who was present, that it was not the business of the commission to suggest it be changed.

The sub-committee was aroused by Dean Pound's admission that if a youth who had a flask at a Harvard football game demanded trial by jury it would still be possible for a district attorney to indict him by grand jury and send him to prison for five years.

Representative Christopherson (Rep.), of South Dakota, chairman of the sub-committee and a dry; Representative Stobbs (Rep.), of Massachusetts, a dry, and Representative Laguardia (Rep.), of New York, a liberal, all attacked this feature of the plan

Retained by Congregation, Minister to Face Trial On Charge of 'Insolence'

DAYTON, Ky., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The vestry of St. John Episcopal Church here voted last night to retain the Rev. Julius Arnold Velasco, 31, as their rector, in spite of a suspension order issued by Bishop H. P. Almon Abbott, of the Lexington diocese.

Mr. Velasco was married to Miss Catherine Rogers, of Ellicot City, Md., by a Catholic priest January 25. Mrs. Velasco is a Catholic.

Mr. Velasco said he had violated no church law and would resign only if it was the will of his congregation.

At Lexington, Bishop Abbott said Mr. Velasco would be brought before an ecclesiastical court on charges of breaking a promise and "behaving with insolence to his bishop."

"Until he is found guilty," Bishop Abbott said, "The Dayton church will be cut off my list of visitations and will be a congregation of its own."

9 HOLDUPS FACE 8 MEN JAILED AS BANDITS

Attempted Wilkinsburg Store Robberies Bring Roundup Of Gang Member Suspects

Eight alleged members of a bandit gang which Wilkinsburg police say is responsible for numerous store holdups, are being held in the borough lockup today, while police investigate their stories. The gang was rounded up this morning by Police Chief Wallace Bishop and Councilman James Bell, a member of the police committee.

The arrests were made following an attempt to hold up the confectionery store of Daniel Shaparo, at 406 Franklin street, Wilkinsburg, last night. A description given Chief Bishop of one of the three robbers who attempted to rob Shaparo, resulted in the first arrest and the others followed shortly after.

The men, so far, Bishop said, have admitted to nine robberies, most of them in Pittsburgh.

SUSPECTS GIVE NAMES

The prisoners identified themselves as Thomas Harding, Negro, of 7309 Tioga street; Allan Grove, of 7337½ Finance street; his brother, Earl Grove, of 6911 Hamilton avenue; Russell Bond, 7429 Susquenanna street; James Walker, 7617 Mulford street; Hugh Berger, 1412 Coal street, Wilkinsburg; James Ross, of 6 Annan way, and Kenneth Kermo, of 419 Rosedale street. Chief Bishop accuses Berger of being the leader of the gang.

Chief Bishop stated today that he had suspected Berger of being implicated in several robberies recently and last night a description of one of the men fitted Berger, police say. Chief Bishop and Councilman Bell arrested Berger at his home. A revolver was found in his possession, the chief said.

At the police station Berger admitted attempting to rob the store, Chief Bishop said. He is said to have implicated his companions and other arrests followed. Berger, Bond and Allen Grove were the trio who tried to rob Shaparo, Bishop stated.

ADMIT ROBBERIES

According to Bishop, the men admitted robbing the chain store at 5301 Hillcrest street Tuesday noon; a chain store at 611 Lincoln avenue Saturday night; two pedestrians at Shady and Penn avenues Sunday night; a drug store in Squirrel Hill and a gasoline station in the same district Sunday night.

Chief Bishop said he would ask state police to look at the men today, as he believes they are implicated in the holdup of a bank in Greensburg last week.

Youth Declares President's Followers Mistreated Sister; Plot Suspected

International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 6.—Under the stress of the third degree, Daniel Flores, would-be assassin of President Pascual Ortiz Rubio, today told the Mexican authorities he had fired six shots at the chief executive a few hours after the inauguration yesterday in revenge for the alleged mistreatment of his sister by the President's political partisans during election disturnances in Charcos, State of San Luis Potosi.

In spite of the fact, Mexican police were rounding up all suspicious characters in the belief the attempted assassination was the result of a carefully-laid plot Flores steadfastly insisted he had acted alone. He refused to implicate any one else in the affair, which resulted in the President being shot in the jaw and members of his family and entourage injured when Flores' six bullets spattered through the windows of Ortiz Rubio's limousine.

SUSPECTS GRILLED

While Flores was undergoing the third degree, the police continued their investigations, wavering between two theories, one being that the shooting was the result of a plot by backers of Jose Vasconcelis, political rival of President Ortiz Rubio, and the other that Communists were responsible.

A score or more of suspects were being interrogated in an effort to substantiate either one of these theories. The police professed to be skeptical of Flores' insistence he was absolutely alone in the affair.

Eminent Mexican psychologists will be called to examine Flores scientifically. He has been described by his inquisitors as a sallow-faced, slender, under-nour-

TAFT RESTLESS, GIVEN OPIATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A sleep-producing potion was given William Howard Taft by his physicians this afternon to aid him in obtaining more rest.

The doctors base much of their hope of prolonging Mr. Taft's life upon his obtaining rest. It was noted last midnight when Dr. Thomas A. Claytor called that the former Chief Justice was awake. It is understood he was wakeful most of this morning.

The physician said that Mr. Taft appeared to be as alert as he was yesterday and that his

Dry Officer Figures in 3 Deaths

The name of a 16-year-old high school student is added to the ever-increasing list of deaths in the vain attempt to enforce prohibition. Incidentally, this is the third death in which the same Federal agent was a principal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—This is a third prohibition enforcement death in which Grady Cobb, federal prohibition agent, is recorded as a principal.

The victim in this third case was James Courson, a 16-year-old high school student of Macon, Ga., who worked after school hours as a motorcycle delivery boy for a Macon store. He was killed on September 15, 1929, in a head-on collision with the automobile of Cobb and other officers.

"Evidence conflicting. Grady Cobb said he had blocked the highway with his auto to trap rum runners. Claude Yearwood, an eye witness, testified at the preliminary hearing that the agents were driving 60 miles an hour on the left side of the road when Courson, on a motorcycle, crashed headon into the car.

"Cobb was held in $500 bond for the grand jury. Cobb said he had arrested Courson a week previously for a prohibition law violation, and that he found liquor beside the wrecked motorcycle after the accident.

"Yearwood said he inspected the wreckage and found no evidence of liquor."

HALL MURDER WIDOW ILL

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The condition of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, principal defendant in the famous Hall-Mills murder case, was reported as "satisfactory" today by officials of Harbor Hospital here, where she is a patient.

Hospital authorities refused to divulge the nature of Mrs. Hall's ailment, nor would they admit she had undergone an operation. Newspaper reports were that she was suffering from cancer.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, on whose testimony that she saw a woman arranging the bodies of Mrs. Hall's husband and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, choir singer, the State demanded the death penalty for Mrs. Hall, today was in a critical condition in a Jersey City hospital. She is suffering from cancer.

Boy Plays 'Carrie Nation' Role in Lunchroom

Charles Pitichek, 17, rear of 175 Cass avenue, today admitted in Morals Court that he kicked down the side door of a lunch room at 21 Bison street because, he charged, his father repeatedly had become intoxicated in the place.

The boy was arrested yesterday on complaint of Frank Artimica, proprietor of the lunchroom.

"My father went to the lunchroom every day for a month," the youth testified before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones. "He would come home drunk and beat my mother and me. I went to the place several times to get him away, but was able to only once."

Artimica admitted the boy's father had come to his lunchroom but denied selling the liquor.

"Your honor," observed Detective James Rae, as the boy finished his story, "if there were more boys in this country like this one America would be a better place to live."

"Discharged," said the magistrate to the youth.

PARLEY AGREES ON PLAN FOR LIMITING NAVAL TONNAGE

FRENCH IDEA ACCEPTED IN PRINCIPLE

Italy Enters Reservations On All Points; Group Destroyers and Cruisers

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The five-power naval conference, sitting as a committee of the whole this afternoon, agreed provisionally on the general outlines of the French plan for limiting naval tonnage, a conference spokesman announced.

The Italians entered reservations on all points. A sub-committee of two experts and one advisor from each delegation will be named to adjust certain technical differences between the two groups, namely, the British and Americans on one hand, and the French and Japanese on the other. The sub-committee also will draft resolutions summarizing the progress which has been made.

TO INSERT FIGURES

In the original French proposal, blank spaces were left for the global or total tonnage figures of each nation. The meeting decided this afternoon that these figures should be inserted before the plan is finally accepted.

It was understood the French proposed that light cruisers and destroyers should be placed in one single category. Japan supported this but the United States and Great Britain opposed it. It finally was decided to leave this for further discussion by the experts.

What virtually amounts to a five power agreement by which submarines will not be abolished, although their activities will be restricted, was also said in conference circles this afternoon to have been achieved.

COMPROMISE LIKELY

No formal understanding has been recorded, but it was said the United States and Great Britain, while advocating the abolition of submarines, were prepared to accept the French viewpoint which provides for continuation of this branch of navies, but with the application of "humanizing" rules governing war activities.

France is supported by Japan and Italy, while willing to abolish submarines, insists on having them if France does.

In conference circles this afternoon it was generally believed that this is what will happen at next Tuesday's plenary session: The United States and Great Britain will advocate the total abolition of submarines, France will submit a proposal for the continuance of submarines, but with "humanizing" restrictions. These will be similar to those laid down by the Washington conference of 1922, but not ratified by France. The United States and Great Britain will accept this compromise, since it is known in advance that both France and Japan are adamant in their insistence that submarines should not be abolished.

Britain Not to Cut Navy Program Further

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Indications that the British government contemplates no further cuts in the 1929-1930 naval program were given by A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, in the House of Commons today.

In a written reply to a question, Alexander said that work on the remaining ships in the program will be allocated shortly. The cuts made thus far, he said, will save the country £6,500,000, approximately $32,500,000. Building of three cruisers has been cancelled.

The amendments proposed by Pound and Wickersham would give the federal judge the right to reverse a commissioner's action of either guilty or innocence, and the accused would have three days after the reversal of an acquittal to demand trial by jury.

Pound said the federal Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, did not guarantee trial by jury in petty criminal cases.

The "juryless trial" plan and most of the other features of the Wickersham commission's report were being assailed at the same time in the Senate by Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York, who challenged President Hoover to carry out his campaign pledge to remedy "grave abuses" in prohibition.

Wagner, a former justice of New York's Supreme Court, declared the commission had proceeded on the "wrong track" by attempting to "cure prohibition without looking to any change in the law." He insisted the President had promised to remedy "grave abuses" and declared the nation expected some action to curb "the killing and maiming of our citizens by armed enforcement officers," alleged violations of the sanctity of the home and "what Mr. Justice Holmes called the 'dirty business of wire tapping.'"

The prohibition law, he said, had created "abysmal confusion" and "mental chaos" in the "very highest places." Instead of really trying to remedy the situation, he added, the "mountains labored and brought forth a mouse—and a very tiny one at that."

"The solution of this problem will not come from those bigoted in their obstinacy," he added. "A new liberalism must be formulated and fostered by those, who, acknowledging the evils of the old system, refuse to go back, and recognizing the evils of the present system, insist on going forward."

SEE ARREST AS DOPE RING CLUE

CLEVELAND, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The arrest of Mrs. Julia Randazzo, who had narcotics with a retail value of $28,000 in her possession, may result in the linking of a New York ring with the death of Mrs. Ruby Roegge, of Los Angeles, aboard the steamship Mongolia in New York Harbor last October, according to Arnold C. Lachenaur, in charge of the Cleveland federal narcotic office.

Mrs. Randazzo, Lachenaur said, is believed to be the Cleveland agent of the New York gang. Mrs. Roegge's death at the time was reported due to suicide by poisoning.

Lachenaur planned further questioning of Mrs. Randazzo today in the hope that she might have information regarding Mrs. Roegge's death.

general condition seemed unchanged.

Dr. Claytor and Dr. Francis B. Hagner said earlier in the day that their "greatest difficulty" was "to administer sufficient nourishment." Otherwise, they said, there was "no material change" in the patient's condition.

Indication that the former chief justice was in no immediate danger was taken from the report here that his sons, Charles P. and Robert A. Taft, were still in Cincinnati and would not arrive in Washington until the weekend.

The physicians, however, made no effort to conceal their concern over their patient whom they still regard as a seriously ill man.

The Senate today adopted a resolution expressing regret over the "serious illness" of Mr. Taft and the hope that he soon would be restored to health.

SILENCE STILL CLOAKS FATE OF WILKINS

Eight Days Since Word Has Flashed Over Radio From Ship in Antarctic

By VICTOR OLSEN,
Wireless operator aboard the S. S. Melville on the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctic, Feb. 6.—(Via S. S. Melville and Kup, San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station.)—It is now eight days and eight nights since we have been able to communicate with the steamship William Scoresby.

Although we have striven for a contact every day and every night, we have not been able to pierce the curtain of mystery which the Antarctic has drawn about Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins.

The Scoresby, with Capt. Wilkins and the entire personnel of his expedition aboard, is somewhere in the vast sea of broken ice to the south of us. It sailed in that direction in search of a runway for a takeoff for the proposed Ross sea flight across the Polar cap.

WHALER MAY SEARCH

If the silence continues an attempt will be made to send one of the spare whalers southward in search of the Scoresby. This will be a difficult matter, however, unless we get some information on the Scoresby's position.

We are still hoping that the Scoresby may have had radio trouble and that she will answer our signals as soon as repairs are made. It is improbable, however, that such repairs, if possible at all, could not have been made in eight days.

We are working in double watches here on the Melville and will continue to make every effort to communicate with the Scoresby.

SHIP AWAITS EMERGENCY

The Melville will be unable to go in search of the Wilkins ship except in case of extreme emergency, for the 160 men at the two whaling stations here are absolutely dependent upon her.

With Capt. Wilkins on the Scoresby is Al Cheesman, pilot on his recent flight of discovery over Charcot Island, Parker Cramer and Orval Porter.

Our contacts with the ships lying to the southwest was very bad today but messages from the Scoresby were very strong the last time we picked her up.

In his aplomb and indifference and imperiousness under rigorous examination, the youth is reported to bear a striking resemblance to Jose De Leon Toral, put to death for assassinating President-elect General Alvaro Obregon.

The President passed a comfortable night and was declared to be out of danger today.

Dona Josefina Ortiz Rubio, wife of the President, whose ear was nipped by another bullet of the would-be assassin when he whipped out a revolver and fired six shots in quick succession at the presidential car after the inaugural, was in a state of nervous collapse. Her wound, however, was not serious.

FOUR OTHERS SHOT

Senorita Maria Roch, niece of the President, who was shot in the neck, was resting easily today. The other three who were struck by bullets from Flores' gun, Lieut. Soutenes Garcia, military aide to the President; the chauffeur of the presidential car, and a bystander, suffered only minor injuries. All three were suffering from inconsequential flesh wounds.

Police vigilance was redoubled today to guard against any outbreaks which might possibly follow yesterday's incident, but there was no indication that martial law would be instituted.

Former President Portes Gil, now minister of the interior, described Flores, who is a native of San Luis Potosi and came here Sunday night, as a "young man of the middle class, fairly well-dressed, and apparently about 23 or 24 years old."

The minister of the interior, expected to continue as administrative head of the government until President Ortiz Rubio's recovery, called the attempt upon the President's life a "heinous crime which reveals clearly the existence of morbid elements that stop at nothing, no matter how dastardly, in order to bring the country to chaos and ruin."

Ortiz Rubio is expected to be able to take up his duties within a week.

FUNCTIONS CANCELED

Official functions in connection with the succession of power to which many American visitors had been given an honored place were canceled last night in view of the shooting, but it was believed the program might be resumed today or tomorrow with the President out of danger.

It was learned today that a few hours before the attempt to kill the President, Flores asked his hotel proprietor who would succeed the President if he should die. In the event of the President's death the chief of the cabinet, the minister of the interior, who in this case is Portes Gil, would become provisional president pending a new election.

U. S. STARTS RADIO TRUST INQUIRY

Justice Department Conducts Investigation, Senate Hearing Is Informed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Information that the Justice Department is conducting an investigation to determine whether the Radio Corporation of America is violating the Sherman anti-trust act was read into the record today as the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearing on the Couzens bill.

A letter from John Lord O'Brian, assistant to the attorney general, which said the inquiry centered on whether the corporation was exceeding its right under patents it holds, was ordered placed in the record by Chairman Couzens.

FREQUENT CHARGES

Witnesses who have appeared before the committee during its hearings on the Couzens bill have made frequent charges of a monopoly against the Radio Corporation.

James G. Harbord, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation, who testified today before the Couzens committee, said he personally would investigate charges that his company "for a few paltry dollars," refused Chicago and other cities use of patents for radio equipment to fight crime.

Harbord said that if he found correct charges made by Senator Wheeler, (Dem.), Montana, in previous testimony, he would see to it that the R. C. A.'s position was altered.

REFUSED AID, CLAIM

Senator Wheeler said that from the statements of Kenneth Cox, Detroit engineer employed by that city's police force to set up a radio alarm system for use in apprehending criminals, it appeared that the R. C. A., "for a few paltry dollars, in effect, refused to assist in fighting crime."

O'Brian's letter revealing the United States inquiry into the corporation, was in response to an inquiry Senator Couzens had made of Attorney General Mitchell.

The letter said the Federal Trade Commission, after a five-year investigation, beginning in 1924, dismissed the R. C. A. case "substantially on the ground that the commission was without jurisdiction to investigate violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act."

"In February, 1929," said O'Brian's letter, "the Federal Trade Commission transmitted to the Attorney General the record of its proceedings and the case was immediately assigned."

INUIRY PUSHED

Since last November, when "adequate service" has been available, O'Brian wrote, "this investigation has had unremitting attention.

"The R. C. A. still owns or controls about 3,500 patents," O'Brian said.

O'Brian wrote that the corporation claimed that every act complained of was protected by the legal monopoly granted by the United States Patent Office.

In this "important ascept," he explained, "the case presents a conflict between the anti-trust laws enacted to prevent monopoly, and the type of monopoly created by the government through the issue of patents."

The assistant attorney general wrote that the department could probably report its attitude within three or four weeks.

O'Brian's letter was read to the committee just before Harboard testified.

Harboard said that because of mergers the British threatened to dominate overseas communication.

"The R. C. A. created the British menace," commented Senator Dill (Dem.), of Washington, by making exclusive contracts with the British communication merger."

This Harboard denied.

Parley Given Women's Plea for Disarmament

By F. A. WRAY

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The voices of the women of the world were heard at the London naval arms conference today when a delegation of 40 women "peace crusaders," representing the women of 45 countries, was received in St. James Palace by Prime Minister MacDonald, Secretary of State Stimson, J. E. Fenton, the Australian delegate, and Prof. Timothy Smiddy, the Irish Free State delegate.

The delegation was received at 10 o'clock this morning in the drawing room of the palace that was Queen Anne Boleyn's in the reign of Henry VIII and has been the scene of most of the important meetings of delegates at the present conference.

Mrs. Edgerton Parsons, of New York, representing the women of America, presented a disarmament resolution to be acted upon at the conference and representatives of the English, French and Japanese women presented similar resolutions.

Mrs. Parsons, in her brief speech before the four eminent statesmen, representing the entire conference, declared that the American resolution represented a plea from 6,000,000 American women for peace through disarmament.

MacDonald, in replying to the resolutions presented by the women, declared that "no hour of the conference has been spent more profitably than this one."

He praised the work of women in the interests of peace and called them pioneers in the work of disarmament. He said he expected that the present conference would result in a good agreement among nations, and moral understanding never before reached. He declared the aim of the conference was to bring about a unity of peace and security which would remove all doubts and fears in the future.

"This deputation has brought an inspiring breath of fresh air into the conference," was Stimson's reply to the speeches of the women.

The general change in the attitude of the nations towards war, he said, was largely due to the efforts of womankind.

Family at Stevenson Bier After Losing Air Race

The wife, brother and sister of Alex. W. Stevenson, realtor and associate Pitt football coach, who died yesterday, arrived at his bier today after a losing airplane race with death from Southern California to Pittsburgh.

Shortly after their arrival at the home, 50 Woodhaven avenue, Mt. Lebanon, arrangements were completed for the funeral services, which will be held there at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night. The Rev. Dr. Clarence Macartney, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, which Mr. Stevenson attended, will conduct the last rites. Interment will be private on Saturday morning.

The death of Mr. Stevenson followed a four-day illness. His wife, his sister, Mrs. W. C. Beall, of Hollywood, Cal., and a brother, L. T. Stevenson, of Pittsburgh, were in Hollywood, where the wife and brother had been visiting since the Pitt-California football game New Year's Day. Warned of the serious illness of Mr. Stevenson, they hurried across the continent by plane. Little more than half way home, they lost the race, Mr. Stevenson dying at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

BERKEY DEFENSE OPENS, ATTACKING CHARGES OF GRAFT

GAMBLER AID FOR JUDGE DENIED

First Witness Says Accuser Introduced Him to Owners Of Somerset Speakeasies

Former Judge John A. Berkey and the 14 others who are on trial with him as members of a great booze ring in Somerset County took possession of the witness stand in Federal Court today.

A dozen witnesses, a majority of them defendants, trotted to the stand today to deny the government's allegations. Judge Berkey himself was expected to take the stand late today or tomorrow.

One of the defense witnesses was William Dittman, defendant and confessed slot-machine distributor, who described himself otherwise as a Monessen florist.

Dittman denied the government's charge that in exchange for "protection" he had promised to give 20 per cent of the machines' receipts to Judge Berkey's campaign fund.

BLAMES ACCUSER

Dittman painted Claude A. M. Welsh, the government's star witness, as the Somerset politician who had introduced him to proprietors of speakeasies.

"Welsh took me and Peter Hanlon (a defendant) around in July, 1928, and introduced us to the proprietors of the joints. We gave Welsh $20 for his trouble. Later he asked for more and I told him I was deaf."

A half dozen other defendants added their denials of knowledge of a conspiracy. One, John E. Custer, president of the First National Bank of Hooversville, admitted that after he learned that Harry Watkins, a government witness, was bootlegging, he, Custer, did not ask Watkins to vacate a building Custer had rented him. Another, Constable Harry Sellers, picked flaws in a confession he admitted having signed and said he signed it because he was afraid prohibition agents would "beat him up."

Judge Berkey himself was expected to take the stand later today to deny Welsh's charges that the jurist engineered the sale of "protection" for campaign funds.

COUNTER CONSPIRACY

Attorney Clarence Shaver, who made the opening address for the defense, branded the prosecution's chain of evidence a "conspiracy to prove the conspiracy charge," and declared that the only purpose of the charges was to destroy Berkey's political influence.

"We will show," Attorney Shaver said, "that while some of the defendants were guilty of selling liquor, none of them acted in conjunction with anyone else, and that none of them knew of or expected protection.

"We will show that the bootleggers who testified for the government, all of whom claimed to have been proffered protection, were tried and sentenced by Judge Berkey, and that the judge never protected any law violator."

OTHER DEFENDANTS

Foster Ziegler, James McIntyre, J. C. Tucker, Ed Sheeler, John Griffith, John Sherman, John Gress, alleged bootleggers; Hanlon and Dittman, alleged slot machine agents; Ed Darr and Emmet Buckman, county detectives; Harry Sellers and Victor Glessner, constables, and John E. Custer, a real estate owner, are the other defendants. Tucker is ill and is unable to be in court, it was said.

Before the prosecution rested, prohibition agents identified liquor they had seized in places operated by Tucker, Griffith, McIntyre and Gress, and testified to purchasing beer in the Colonial Hotel, operated by Clark and Sherman.

MILITARY RULE ORDERED AT PRISON

Army Veteran Appointed to 'Discipline' Mutinous Convicts in Colorado

International News Service.

CANON CITY, Col., Feb. 6.—The Colorado state penitentiary is going to be put on a military basis in an effort to "clean up" conditions in the institution, which in the past few months have resulted in riot, mutiny and arson, and caused the death of eight guards and five convicts.

The state board of corrections, governing body of the prison, today announced the appointment of Col. Patrick J. Hamrock as special deputy warden, to become effective immediately.

MILITARY CAREER

Hamrock, with a long career as severe disciplinarian in military affairs, has been instructed to "take complete charge, put the institution on a military basis and reorganize the forces within the prison."

Serious charges were made against a number of prison guards following the bloody uprising of last October.

Hamrock was in charge of the Colorado national guard during the famous "Ludlow massacre," when many coal miners were shot down by machine guns during the Southern Colorado coal strike of 1913.

Col. Hamrock is a man of wide experience in military affairs, having been commanding officer of the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Infantry in the World War. After the armistice, he was in charge of embarcation activities at Bordeaux.

JUDGE SCORES JURY'S VERDICT

Because the two defendants had practically admitted possession of liquor manufacturing paraphenalia, Judge Nelson McVicar today in Federal Court characterized as "most inconsistent" a jury's verdict of acquittal on two counts in the case of Teodor Uzelic and his wife, Milly, of 148 Watkins street, Wilkinsburg.

Both, however, were found guilty on charges of possession of two 15-gallon wash boilers of mash and more than 400 empty bottles said to have been for bottling off liquor and beer.

Uzelic was fined $400 on the charge and his wife $200.

The trial of Moody Champ, former Wilmerding police officer, before Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court this week on charges of interference with prohibition agents, grew out of the same raid. The jury disagreed after more than 22 hours of deliberation.

Joint indictments of sale of beer on last April 9 and 10, and possession of 237 quarts of beer and a quart of moonshine whisky, resulted in acquittal verdicts.

Mrs. Uzelic also was acquitted of a charge of destruction of evidence which is said to have occurred when prohibition officers raided the establishment. The jury was out six hours.

Champ was arrested when he is alleged to have interfered with the officers in an effort to prevent the raid.

TAXI PEACE OVERTURES DENIED

Strikers Refute Reports At Night Mass Meeting; 'Red' Pamphlets Taken

Rumors of overtures toward settlement of the month-old taxicab drivers' strike fell flat today with denials that such plans had even been considered. The denials were made at last night's mass meeting of strikers in Moose Temple, during which a man and a woman were arrested for distributing so-called "red" literature.

E. S. Higgins, vice president of the Parmalee Company, said he knew nothing of any peace move in the strike, either on the part of the company or the strikers.

The meeting last night, closed to all except drivers, was reported to have been nothing more than a "pep" rally, although it was learned that the strikers' executive committee met secretly several times, finally reporting back to the mass meeting which was adjourned until Sunday afternoon.

Paul Toole, chairman of the strikers' committee, declined to discuss last night's meeting.

At union headquarters in the McGeagh Building the same attitude was taken by other members of the committee.

LEADERS DENOUNCED

Those arrested for distrubting the alleged inflammatory literature were Mis Rae Heim, 26, of 924 James street, and Pearl Mann, 21, of 831 Concord street.

The leaflets they were said to have been distributing among strikers in Penn avenue as they approached the meeting hall were declared by police to constitute an attack upon the injunction obtained by the Parmelee Company to restrain strikers from interfering with the operation of Green and Yellow cabs, and contained a general denunciation of officials and attorneys representing the cab drivers' union.

"Make the company meet ALL YOUR DEMANDS," the leaflet read. It referred to "Lawyer Mazer," (Attorney Leonard Mazer) as being an "agent of the company," instead of representing the strikers. It denounced "A. F. of L. fakers like Robertson and Burger" (Robertson is acting state president of the American Federation of Labor and Burger is an international organizer for the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union.)

The pamphlet urged mass picketing in defiance of injunctions and the strikers were invited to join the Trade Union Unity League, the organization alleged to have been responsible for the leaflet.

WILL SEEK DAMAGES

Miss Mann and Miss Heim were charged with violating a city ordinance. The former was fined $25 with the alternative of serving 30 days in jail and the latter $10 or 10 days by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court today.

Officials of both the Green and Yellow Cab Companies today intimated they would seek damages from the county for equipment wrecked by strikers.

"Our attorneys have been instructed to take the necessary steps towards presenting our claims just as soon as this trouble is over," declared E. S. Higgins, vice president of the Parmelee company.

At the sheriff's office it was learned that the usual procedure is to wait until the strike has been settled. Only recently claims for damages in the labor riots of 1877 were paid, it was revealed.

Another statement issued from company headquarters was a denial of rumors that Pittsburgh business men were considering the purchase of the cab companies.

FOUR MORE ARRESTED

Two more arrests for interference were made last night. John Pardus, 32, of Page street, and Frank McSteem, 24, of 5201 Dearborn street, were those arrested. They were booked as suspicious persons.

Two strikebreakers also were arrested. They were Harry Arnold, 35, and Tony Cost, 27, both of 2 Rose street. They were charged with violation of city ordinances. Arnold is alleged to have blocked traffic with his cab and Cost is said to have "run through" a red light.

TWO DEATH CAR DRIVERS HELD

Two automobile drivers were held on manslaughter charges by a coroner's jury today as a result of fatal accidents.

Stanko Menich, of 32 Superior street, Duquesne, was held for the death, January 6, of William J. Carson, of Dravosburg. He was struck while walking along the McKeesport-Clairton road in Bethel Township, by a car driven by Menich.

Barney Hindman, of Coal Valley, was held in the death of Philip Sayre, 42, of Dravosburg, who suffered a fractured skull when a bicycle he was riding was struck by a car driven by Hindman near Sayre's home, January 30. He died the same day.

Lacks Funds for Wedding, Tries River Leap

Because his finances did not warrant getting married, Anthony Wrobleski, 24, of 2711 Mulberry way, tried to end his life by jumping into the Allegheny River this afternoon, police reported.

Constable William R. Johnson, of O'Hara Township, saw Wrobleski climbing over the rail of the Thirty-first Street Bridge and halted him, according to police.

The police said that Wrobleski was despondent because, being the sole support of a sick mother and a sister, he was unable to accumulate funds to get married.

Oil Tank Explosion Rocks Bayonne, N. Y.

SHOWGIRL SUIT FILE MISSING

The disappearance from the files in the office of the clerk of the Federal District Court of a statement of claim filed by Myrtle C. Bauer, of New York, against Ludwig Kaufmann, of the Kaufmann-Looby Company, is being investigated by Clerk of Court J. Wood Clark.

The suit filed on January 13 was "discontinued and settled" on January 29, according to the entries on the court docket. The docket entry of settlement was signed by Attorney D. K. Ferree as counsel for the plaintiff.

Mr. Ferree said he was merely the Pittsburgh representative of Attorney Anthony Ruffalo, of New York, who was the plaintiff's counsel. The Pittsburgh attorney was reticent concerning the claims of the New York woman, said to be a showgirl, nor would he divulge the "settlement." He referred interviewers to Attorney Ruffalo.

Neither Mr. Clark nor any of his assistants in his office could throw any light on the missing statement of claim. Mr. Clark said he was satisfied it had not been misfiled and expressed his belief that it had been removed from the file by somebody interested in the case. He said its disappearance was discovered a few days after it was filed.

Withers, Bride Together; Annullment Wanes

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The ship of matrimony, launched by two young film luminaries 12 days ago with an airplane elopement, sailed into smooth seas today with the announcement by Mrs. George U. Belzer that she would withdraw a suit to annul the marriage of her daughter, Loretta Young, 17, to Grant Withers, 24.

The matrimonial bark encountered its first difficulty on January 25, when the bride and bridegroom returned from Yuma, Ariz., where the ceremony was performed, to face a storm of parental protests. But Miss Young settled the question of its stability yesterday with a statement that "Grant and I are married, and we are going to stay married."

The first heavy sea struck when Mrs. Belzer, who openly opposed the match, found the pair on January 26, obtained admissions from both that they had acted impulsively, and took her daughter home. She said she had obtained Withers' consent to an "amicable annulment." The annulment suit was filed on January 26.

The next day the first Mrs. Withers filed a petition for an increase from $60 to $300 a month in her alimony. She said an illness of their 4-year-old son had increased expenses connected with his schooling and made it impossible for her to get along on $60 a month.

It generally was thought that Miss Young and Withers had abandoned their matrimonial ship, at least for a year. Mrs. Belzer had said she would not oppose their re-marriage when her daughter became 18 years old. The first intimation that they had not separated came yesterday morning when George U. Belzer, the girl's step-father, disclosed that the actress had left the parental home. He said she had returned to Withers and that apparently the newlyweds had tried "to fool" his wife with calm acquiesence to her annulment program.

Attorneys for Mrs. Belzer disclosed that three days after the suit was filed, Withers stated that he had changed his mind and that he and Miss Young had decided to remain man and wife.

In view of this, the attorney said Mrs. Belzer had decided not to press the annulment suit.

John Alden's Descendant Loses Balm Suit

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Alden S. Condict, descendant of John Alden, the Pilgrim, lost his case today. A jury brought in a verdict for the defendant in Condict's $150,000 alienation suit against Dr. Fenton Turck, prominent biologist, father of the plaintiff's divorced wife, Katherine. The jury was out five hours.

A motion to set aside the verdict was denied by Supreme Court Justice Edward J. McGoldrick.

Condict appeared surprised at the verdict.

"It was a great shock to me," he said. "I expected something different."

Dr. Turck, his wife, Mrs. Turck, and Katherine Turck, their daughter, were not in court when the sealed verdict was read.

Condict charged that Dr. Turck had placed "hatred instead of love in the heart of Katherine." He testified that he was put under an economic hardship when he had to pay a furniture bill amounting to $1,492 for his bridal apartment.

Counsel for Dr. Turck charged that Condict had looked upon Katherine Turck as a "dollar and cents" wife.

The former debutante testified that her husband had refused to pay the electric light bill and that she "fled in terror" from the darkness.

SOVIET DIRECTS EIELSON HUNT

By T. M. (PAT) REID.
Flight Commander Aviation Corporation Eielson Expedition

MOTORSHIP NANUK, OFF CAPE NORTH (Siberia)—By Radio and Cable via Point Barrow, Alaska, Feb. 6.—Pilot R. S. Stuppnov, commander of the Soviet Eielson rescue expedition, which has two planes here, flew to the scene of Carl Ben Eielson's wrecked plane 90 miles southeast of here and will remain to take charge in behalf of the Soviet government.

He took several more men with him to augment the digging crew which consists now of approximately 10 men. They were unable to do any work at the wrecked plane for the past four days on account of storms.

Pilots Joe Crosson and Ed Young took advantage of a break in the weather this morning and flew to the wreck with supplies for the working party. Commander Stuppnov also took along supplies and more digging equipment.

There have been no new discoveries at the wreck to indicate where the bodies of Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, might be recovered, although it is still felt they are buried in hardened snow drifts near their plane.

I am planning to leave for Teller with Olaf Swenson, fur trader and skipper of the Nanuk, and his 17-year-old daughter Marion, both of whom have been marooned here since the ship became icebound late last fall. Capt. Milovzorov, skipper of the Soviet steamer Stavropol, icebound three miles north of us, will accompany us to Teller. I expect to return to the Nanuk at once with gasoline and replenish our supply. We have been handicaped by the shortage of fuel.

CRASH VERDICT SET ASIDE

he duty of a motorist to stop, look and listen at railroad crossing, and to leave his car to look along the tracks in the event of an obstruction o view was upheld by Judge James H. Gray, II (Common Pleas Court, denying a verdict of $1?,000 awarded Mrs. Jessie M. Weber, of Overbrook. The verdict was returned by a jury in her suit against the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway Co.,pan for the death of her husband, Albert P. Weber.

Judge Gray granted a motion b the railroac company for judgment, notwithstanding the verdict, at the same time ruling against a ne trial. Argument had been made before Judges Gray, James R. Macfarlane and Elder W. Marshall.

Weber, 61, was killed when a train struck his automobile at the Sycamore street, Overbrook, grade crossing, June 16, 192 . The chief argument against the verdict by the railroad company was that it was excessive. Judge Gray, in an opinion, held that under the testimony the conclusion was inescapable that the collision was inevitable, as Weber had not looked, or if he had, that the train was close and he attempted to cross ahead of it.

SUSPECT HELD IN MURDER

With one man held for court in connection with the murder of John Silan, 38, storekeeper of Jerome street, McKeesport, police today were searching for a Negro resident of McKeesport, who they believe fired the fatal shot.

Alderman Robert C. Calhoun of McKeesport, last night, bound over without bail, Henry Rodman, 24, of 743 Grant street, that city, as an accessory to attempted robbery. The Alderman released Andrew Pagey, 27, of Second avenue, arrested with Rodman.

Police arrested the pair after a statement by Thomas White, 24, a Negro of Milford street, Duquesne, who claimed he was in company with the man sought, when the robbery was planned. White told police he declined to participate in the holdup.

An alleged speakeasy conducted by Rodman at 410 Huey street, was raided yesterday; a quantity of whisky being seized, police said.

DREXEL GIVEN 'DORM' FUND

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6.—(AP)—A gift of $300,000 from Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, toward the erection of a women's dormitory at Drexel Institute, was announced here by Dr. Kenneth G. Matheson, president of the college. This gift of Curtis, who is a member of the board of trustees of Drexel, brings his donations to the institution in the last six years to more than $1,400,000.

The dormitory is to be erected and furnished at a cost of $500,000, and Curtis, in making his gift, it was announced, expressed the hope that other friends of the college would supply the remainder. A friend of the institution, who wished to remain anonymous, has donated $25,000.

The dormitory, which will be 10 stories in height and will accommodate 250 women students and official staff, is expected to be ready for occupancy early in January. The building will also house the nursery play school, the practice house and certain other units of the school of home economics of Drexel Institute. There will be recreational facilities and later a swimming pool.

WIFE ACCUSES RICH HUSBAND

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Charging that her husband, Joseph L. Stone, wealthy official of the United Petroleum Company, had her every movement watched and that he had threatened to "take her for a ride," Mrs. Catherin Stone has filed a cross bill for separate maintenance in answer to a divorce action.

Mrs. Stone was an art student when she eloped with her husband in 1926. She was then 16.

For two years she asserted she has been constantly followed by detectives, even to church. She said her husband threatened to have his "connections" take her for a ride when she persisted in keeping their son, Joseph, Jr. He kidnaped the child from her, she said, while she was visiting in Des Moines, Ia.

CANAL SETBACK SEEN IN RIVAL ROUTE PLANS

Battle Again at Starting Point as Ohio Boosters Get Hearing on Plans

Ghosts of by-gone waterway projects have been brought back to haunt Pittsburgh industrial interests and the Lake Erie and Ohio Canal Board as a result of a misunderstanding at the public hearing Tuesday before the United States engineers in Washington.

The decision of the Engineers' Board to grant a rehearing within four months to the proponenets of the Miami, the Scioto and the French Creek routes has thrown the whole question of an Ohio-Great Lakes canal back where it was six years ago, according to Pittsburgh transportation men. Although the hearing was called for the specific purpose of hearing new evidence as to the economic necessity of the Pittsburgh-Ohio-Lake Erie project, and a large delegation went from here under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, the Lake Erie-Ohio representatives were given only two hours, the remainder of the day being given over to boosters of competitive routes from Cincinnati, Portsmouth, O., and Oil City, Pa.

EVIDENCE ALL IN

"The evidence for the Pittsburgh-Ohio-Lake Erie route upon which we have been working for 20 years is all in, and we are anxious to get the question before Congress," said William H. Stevenson, chairman of the Lake Erie and Ohio Canal Board. "In 1925 Col. C. W. Kutz in his final report threw out the Miami, the Scioto and Allegheny Valley routes and the question remained for us to prove the economic value of our project, there never having been any doubt as to its practicability. There was amazement when a large delegation from Cincinnati, Portsmouth, Columbus and other localities appeared and raised the issue on matters which we believed had been disposed of by the Kutz report five years ago. We had two hours to present our case while our opponents took an entire afternoon of the board's time."

After hearing the assertions of the opposing routes the board granted four months for them to gather further evidence for a further hearing. Many Pittsburghers in the delegation did not have an opportunity to give their testimony, these representatives including executives of some of the largest shippers on the proposed waterway.

"It looks as if we must make our fight all over again," said Chairman Stevenson.

Supporting the Lake Erie and Ohio canal were many of the leading shippers and business men from Youngstown, New Castle and the Beaver Valley district.

OHIO PLAN AMAZES

While it was regarded by Chairman Stevenson and the members of the Chamber of Commerce delegation that the hearing represented Pittsburgh's "day in court," the crowd from Cincinnati and other places who constituted the opponents said they interpreted it as a call for promoters of all Ohio-to-the-Lakes projects.

Pittsburghers said they were given a distinct shock when the advocates of the Scioto canal from Portsmouth to Sandusky again presented their claims and argued that their route would afford a low-price tonnage outlet for West Virginia coal. With West Virginia coal now enjoying a differential in rates for rail haulage to the lakes, it was declared that the proposition for the government to build a canal for that purpose was the "last straw." The Portsmouth-Sandusky route would be nearly 300 miles long and it was turned down years ago, according to the engineers.

JEWELS ORDERED SEIZED

POLA NEGRI

Miss Negri, film star whose jewels were ordered seized by Berlin courts on petition of Sam Rachman, who claims she owes him $75,000. Pola has now arrived in Paris and has the jewels.

GEMS' SEIZURE DENIED BY POLA

PARIS, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—"I have all my jewels with me so the Berlin courts can't do a thing about it."

With a silvery laugh, Pola Negri thus greeted reports from Berlin that Sam Rachmann, motion picture agent, had attached gems in lieu of money alleged to be due him.

Pola was quick to deny that the jewels had been seized and offered to show them.

"I will surely win the suit," she said, "since Rachman's allegations are absolutly groundless."

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Pola Negri's jewels were ordered seized today under a court order issued here upon the petition of Sam Rachmann, a motion picture agent and manager.

Rachmann contended that the well known film star owed him $75,000 for negotiating her American contracts for film appearances. The court allowed his claim and ordered the jewels confiscated in lieu of payment.

Pola and her husband, Prince Mdvani, departed for St. Moritz.

The couple were recently reconciled after divorce proceedings had been started in Paris. It was Pola's first visit in several years to Berlin, the city where she first achieved success.

APPEALS ARSON CONVICTION

Samuel Benjamin, butcher, of 5170 Butler street, today was to post $5,000 bond, pending an appeal from his conviction by a jury in Criminal Court last night on a charge of arson.

The jury brought in a verdict of guilty shortly after 7:30 o'clock and immediately afterward, Attorney Louis Little, counsel for the defense, announced that he would appeal for a new trial. Benjamin was released in Attorney Little's custody last night.

The Butler street butcher was indicted in connection with an explosion in the cellar of his four-story building last September. The body of an unidentified man was found in the cellar and in his clothing was found a check for $500, made payable to cash and signed by Benjamin.

Police and firemen alleged that the explosion had been caused by gasoline and rock powder.

40,000 Unpaid, Thompson To Spurn Cash Rescue

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Chicago's ever-deepening financial muddle grew more involved today when it was indicated that Mayor William Hale Thompson plans to defy the city Council's request to adopt the Silas H. Strawn rescue plan—the only plan whereby 40,000 unpaid employes hoped to obtain emergency relief.

City and county workers have gone without their pay checks for five weeks.

Added to this was the discouraging prediction of City Comptroller George K. Schmidt, who stated that even if buyers are found for 1930 tax anticipation warrants through the Strawn rescue committee, the city will face another serious financial crisis July 1, when, he said, all revenue for 1930 will have been exhausted.

Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson is said to oppose the Strawn group's stipulation that only payrolls and departments regarded as "emergent" by the committee will be given a helping hand from the $50,000,000 fund pledged by large business houses.

Departure of President H. Wallace Caldwell, of the School Board for New York, was taken as an indication that the administration has been at work on relief plans of its own.

Negotiations have been under way to sell $46,000,000 of the School Board's tax warrants to New York bankers, although Chicago bankers have refused to honor the warrants. The administration declined to state whether Caldwell had been tendered a definite order by New York financial interests.

RITCHIE URGES BAY BRIDGE

BALTIMORE, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Possibility that the state itself would be the builder of the proposed bridge across the Chesapeake Bay to connect the eastern and western shores of the state was broached in a formal statement by Gov. Ritchie, in which he stressed the fact that the bridge must be built, regardless of who does the building.

Possibility that the corporation formed to build the $11,000,000 structure, headed by Stuard S. Janney, state director of welfare, would be unable to finance it through the depression in the bond market which so far has brought no bids for bonds to be issued for the purpose, was voiced by the executive.

STATE PROJECT

In his statement, Gov. Ritchie said:

"The proposed bridge across Chesapeake Bay is too important to the whole state, and particularly is it too important to the trade interests and for the mutual convenience of the people of the Eastern Shore and of Baltimore City, for the project to be allowed to fail.

"If the private capital which has been interested is not going to finance the bridge—and I still hope it will—then the state of Maryland should get behind the proposition and give such aid as will assure its construction, and it is my purpose to work out a sound financial plan for the state to do this should it become necessary."

MONEY HELD UP

The chief executive pointed out the appropriation made by the 1929 session of the Legislature for construction of road approaches to the bridge in Baltimore and Kent Counties should be taken from the state bonds issuable on February 15, 1930, but it was further provided that these approaches should not be built unless contracts had been already made by private capital for construction of the bridge and the State Road Commission was of the opinion the bridge would be completed within a reasonable time.

The enabling act, providing approval for construction of the bridge, was passed by the 1927 session of the Legislature, and provided that it must be completed within five years, or March 31, 1932. The Legislature at its last session also provided $70,000 subsidy to defray cost of the first year's operation.

HAITI APPROVES U. S. ACTION

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The announcement by President Hoover on the Haitian question and the coming appointment of a commission to investigate the status of American interests in the Republic, was received with satisfaction in many circles here, including the opposition party.

The newspaper "La Presse" called upon all citizens to await the outcome of the inquiry with patience. Another opposition journal, "Le Nouvelliste" said that it was going to add its voice to the cry of "Long Live Hoover." Government newspapers reserved comment, pending reception of the full text of President Hoover's statement.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—What is described as the largest wood pulp and saw mill plant in the world, situated at Oestrand, in the Northern Subdsvall district, and owned by the Ivar Kreuger wood industry combine, has begun operation. The annual output is estimated at 100,000 tons.

At the same time Mr. Kreuger is reported to have purchased the controlling interest in the most important German wood pulp plant.

"Spring Is Near"

—These Suit-Ensembles Seem to Say

They so happily fill the February desire for clothes with a spring flavor, that they are being chosen to wear immediately under winter coats. . . . By those, of course, who know how very important the suit is going to be this spring!

The model at right is from a feature group of women's and misses' Tailored Ensembles at $69.50. . . . Of pointella, a new lightweight woolen in navy blue flecked with white, with blouse and jacket lining of vivid Jeanne d'Arc blue crepe.

Other ensembles in the group are of monotone tweed, flecked tweed and covert.

The other one is from a feature group of Sports Ensembles at $25. . . . Of nubbed tweed, in beige flecked with hazy purples and red. With silk crepe blouse, in beige with piping and collar in purple tones.

Others at this price are of lightweight kashmir fabric and basket weave . . . Women's and misses' sizes.

. . . Horne's, Second Floor . . .

15 Fur Coats

Decisively Reduced to

$125

A small group, but extraordinary values! . . . Coats for women and misses, including sizes 14 to 38. (Misses' sizes predominate). They are of the very smart and youthful lapin, in beige and nutria shades. And of muskrat in natural color and silver.

. . . Horne's, Second Floor . . .

Llama Coats

Now Re-Marked to

$75 and $100

Such staple garments as these luxurious all-purpose coats (the finest coats of their kind in the world) are never found at reduced prices, except when we clear stocks between seasons.

The two groups for women include shades of brown, black, black-oxford, dark blue and gray. Trimmed with caracul in black, gray or brown, kit fox, beaver, natural gray squirrel and raccoon.

. . . Horne's, Second Floor . . .

A Comfortable All-in-One Garment

This is the figure-molding garment that has made so many women converts to the boneless foundation garment. Intricate seaming and shaping of the firm fabrics accomplish the curving lines of the new fashions . . . and are particularly helpful in giving a long, slender diaphragm line.

The Coquette is priced $10 to $49.50, according to the fabric used. One model with a pantie is priced $12.50.

"Escape"

By Francesco Nitti

The thrilling story of the first men to succeed in escaping from the mysterious Fascist prison island of Lipari.

To a world which is barely aware of the existence of such a convict colony, they bring a revelation of the brutal tyranny exercised by the Fascist government over its political opponents . . . a harrowing description of life on the penal islands where men go mad. The account, which rivals the most exciting fiction, is from first-hand experience. $2.50.

. . . Horne's, Main Floor . . .

Boys' High Boots, $4.95

Already boys are out shooting marbles in the muddy, thawing fields . . . in a few more weeks they'll be flying kites in fields still muddier. And they'll need shoes that will stand hard usage.

These sturdy, well-made high boots of strong elkskin, as near waterproof as leather can be made, will stand the strain of active, outdoor play.

SPAIN FORGIVES DE RIVERA FOES

MADRID, Feb 6 (AP) A royal decree was issued today declaring a general amnesty for all persons accused or convicted of rebellion or sedition against the Spanish government during the dictatorship of Gen Primo De Rivera, who was overthrown last week.

The decree wiped out charges against Jose Antonio Sanchez Guerra, former Liberal premier who has been facing retrial on account of sedition growing out of the abortive Ciudad Real rebellion of 1928 and against other civilians and army officers connected with revolutionary attempts at that city and Valencia and Segovia.

The action was taken on the anniversary of the death of Maria Christina, mother of King Alfonso, who died last year after a long illness. Several hundred persons, many of them officers in the Artillery corps, are affected.

Sanchez Guerra intends immediately to re-enter politics, heading a new political group of Liberals.

Meanwhile Francisco Gambo Barcelona financier and former minister of finance, is assembling bankers, merchants, industrialists and noblemen into a Conservative party.

Some observers expect Rivera and his followers to reorganize the Patriotic Union party and have it take its place in parliamentary affairs as a party of the middle.

Plane Crash Reports Urged in Senate

WASHINGTON Feb 6 (INS)—The Department of Commerce would be directed to make public its reports on all airplane accidents since May 20, 1926, under a resolution favorably reported today by the Senate Commerce Committee. The resolution was sponsored by Senator Bratton (Dem.), of New Mexico following a crash in his state that took eight lives.

Hospital Patient Leaps to Death

WASHINGTON Pa Feb 6 (INS.)—Leaping from the window of Emergency Hospital Mrs Gladys Sterns 25 fell seven stories to her death today. She had been in the hospital ever since she fell from a fourth-story window of an apartment house five months ago.

VATICAN CITY Feb 6 (AP) The pontifical banner yellow and white bearing the insignia of the tiara or triple crown and the massive crossed keys of St Peter below it was run up today at dawn in the courtyard of St Damasus in the heart of the Vatican City State, to commemorate the eighth anniversary of Pope Pius XI's election to the highest office in the Catholic world.

In honor of the occasion all the armed forces of the Pope's domain were mobilized.

The clerical staff of the secretary of state's office was kept busy drafting replies to messages of congratulation to His Holiness from over the world. A year ago the Pope was still "the prisoner of the Vatican." Today he is, by virtue of the Lateran accords, an independent monarch.

Wednesday, February 12, Pope Pius will attend a solemn high mass in the Sistine Chapel, marking the eighth anniversary of his formal coronation. That ceremony will be attended by the diplomatic corps accredited to the Holy See.

BRINGS INSTANT RELIEF

Druggists Report Enormous Sales of New Pepsin Elixir.

If you take real pepsin and take it in liquid form your stubborn indigestion will soon be a thing of the past and you will be the owner of a good healthy stomach capable of digesting the heartiest meal without distress.

Among pharmacists just now a new improved elixir of Pepsin called Dare's Mentha Pepsin is creating a sensation—the sales are enormous.

"I think" said one pharmacist the other day, "that everybody is deserting the old time relievers and turning to Dare's Mentha Pepsin which is delightful to the palate and ends indigestion, gas bloating and that near feeling of suffocation for good—not just for a few hours."

There's plenty of real pepsin in Dare's Mentha Pepsin —, there's Menthol and other stomach correctives and it is sold by druggists in every city and town in America with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't do your distressed stomach more good than anything you ever tried money back. Any druggist always has a big supply on hand.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle, then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germladen phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Here's good news

lessens shaving irritation

MEN with tender skin discovered this luxury shave. They found that after it their faces felt cool and smooth, and that their razors never pulled. They passed the idea on to their friends, and now there's quite a group of "Vaseline" shavers. They are not all men with tender skins and tough beards, either. ANY man's face, normal or sensitive, shows its gratitude for this simple, soothing treatment.

Wouldn't you like to join this comfort club? Membership is open. All you have to do is spread a thin film of "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly over the beard before you shave. Lather as usual. Your razor strokes quicker and closer and your face looks and feels better. The Jelly heals any little nicks or scratches, too, and softens dry or chapped skin.

Try it once and you'll never shave without "Vaseline" Jelly. You can buy it in jars or tubes at all good drug stores.

A story for all office workers

All the employment agencies knew him by that name. A sober, industrious, capable employee—but no one wanted him around. He flitted from job to job. Couldn't afford to do it either. Getting old. Married. Children. It would have been a kindness for some one to tell him what his trouble was.

Employers, personnel managers, department heads, simply will not tolerate employees who have halitosis (bad breath). You can readily understand why.

Halitosis is wide spread—due to the fact that everyday conditions (many of germ origin) develop in the mouth and cause odors. Defective teeth. Minor infections. Fermenting food particles.

Eliminate all risk of offending others by the daily use of full strength Listerine, the safe antiseptic.

So active a germicide it kills the Staphylococcus Aureus (pus) and Bacillus Typhosus (typhoid) germ in counts ranging to 200,000,000, full strength Listerine strikes at the cause of mouth odors. Then, being a powerful deodorant, destroys the odors themselves. Our free Book of Etiquette will be sent on request. Address Dept. H 7, Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

ACTION ASKED IN CIRCLE PLAN

President John S. Herron, of City Council, said today he will call a meeting within two weeks for a showdown on street changes demanded by proposed terminal extensions of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

These call for a traffic separation in Penn and Liberty avenues at Eleventh street.

"We do not have the money to adopt plan Z as proposed by the Planning Commission, as that adds a cost of $1,500,000 additional," said Mr. Herron. "Personally, I favor plan T because of the city's financial condition. That plan is favored by the railroads. Something should be done without further delay."

Vice President E. T. Whiter, of the Pennsylvania, questioned regarding the railroad's attitude toward plans, said he would gladly discuss them with the members of Council and those concerned. "We desire to go ahead with the improvement at the earliest possible moment," he added. "Our new station and other plans call for an expenditure of $20,000,000."

SCHOOL WIRING CHARGES HIT

Engineering experts employed by the Board of Education have violated an agreement for comparison of material and labor items on electrical work in school jobs, according to a statement issued by the Electrical Contractors' Association of Pittsburgh. Officials of the association reiterated denial of the board's charges of collusion among bidders for electrical contracts.

Bidders for the electrical contract at the Taylor Allderdice High School are defended by the association in the statement. The contract for this work was let by the school board Monday night to the Fort Pitt Electric Company on its bid of $42,807.

AUTOIST VICTIM OF BANDIT

Henry Roth, of 128 Van Wyck avenue, Brentwood, and a woman companion, were held up by a robber who early today shoved a revolver through the open window of their automobile parked in Hobart street, near the Schenley Park entrance. The robber took $7 from Roth, according to a report made to police.

Mrs. Margaret Stewart, of 2314 Hallet street, was robbed of her purse containing $7, while walking in Wylie avenue, at Green street this morning. The thief passed the woman and snatched the purse from her hand.

Two Held in Theft From Candy Firm

Charged with the robbery of the Famous Candy Company, 522 Eighth avenue, Munhall, Oliver Menerno, 34, of 705 Jerome street, McKeesport, and Alfred Vosguez, 35, of Heisel street, Homestead, were held for court by Justice of the Peace Edward M. Cox, of Munhall, last night.

The men were arrested by County Detective Michael McDermott and Patrolman William Fisher, of Munhall. Police today were searching for three other men said to be implicated in robberies of the company, a wholesale concern.

Bellevue Accepts Yuletide Plaque

Burgess W. J. Longmore, of Bellevue, has approved resolutions passed by council, accepting a silver plaque awarded to Bellevue for Christmas decorations under auspices of the Board of Trade, and commending that organization for its enterprise. The award was the first prize given by the Civic Club of Allegheny County. The plaque will be placed in the municipal building.

Boy's Leg Broken By Auto, Driver Held

Struck by an automobile at Fifth street, Braddock, last night, Herman Waller, 8, of 511 Pitcairn street, Braddock, was taken to the Braddock General Hospital. The boy sustained a fracture of the leg. The driver of the car, said by hospital authorities to have been Angelo Russo, of 16 Kenmawr avenue, Rankin, was arrested.

Three Flee Home In Morning Blaze

Damages estimated at $4,000 followed a fire in the home of Lawrence Smith, Negro, of 7412 Monticello street, this morning. Starting in the basement, of undetermined origin, the flames swept upwards, destroying the roof. Mrs. Smith and two roomers, in the house at the time, escaped to the street.

21 Bruce Paintings Shown at Institute

The exhibition will continue through March 9, as will exhibitions from the collection of W. S. Stimmel and drawings by Pierre Bourdelle.

PRISON REVOLT FRUSTRATED

PHILADELPHIA Feb 6 (AP)—Rumors of recent disorders at the county prison at Holmesburg were confirmed by prison officials but the situation was said to be in hand and no further trouble expected.

E. J. Lafferty president of the Board of Prison Inspectors declared that reports that some men were killed during a flare up inside the prison were "fabrications."

"Prison officials were informed of what was in the wind," he said, "and acted in time to prevent any widespread difficulty. Prisoners are likely to get out of hand at times. Sometimes it's the food, sometimes overcrowding, but I am not saying either of these caused the upset. Several convicts were punished to maintain discipline and as a warning to others.

"The new board is doing its utmost to enforce authority in a prison with 1,400 men crowded into 700 cells. Rumors of disturbances in other prisons have sifted into Holmesburg and have had an unfortunate effect on the inmates. The board will make a complete statement shortly."

ITALY, AUSTRIA SIGN TREATY

ROME Feb 6 (INS)—A treaty of friendship and arbitration between Italy and Austria was signed here today.

Premier Benito Mussolini signed on behalf of Italy while Chancellor Johann Schober of Austria signed for his nation.

The treaty marks a new era in the relationships between these two nations, as of recent years there has been considerable friction, particularly over the nationalization policies of Premier Mussolini which involved the education and language of hundreds of Austrian-born residents of the lower Adige now Italian territory.

The treaty provides for all future disputes to be submitted to a tribunal for arbitration.

PHILA. CHIEFS BACK BROWN

PHILADELPHIA Feb 6 (AP)—Representative leaders of the Philadelphia Republican organization have pledged themselves to fight for the nomination for governor of former Attorney General Francis Shunk Brown.

In speeches which resounded with threats of revolt if Mr. Brown were not indorsed four of the "war board" of the Philadelphia organization declared they would insist on his nomination.

A large delegation from Dauphin County, including many supporters of the late E. E. Beidleman, and about 30 Republicans from Bethlehem applauded the declarations of the Philadelphia leaders made last night at the annual dinner of the Thirty-fifth Ward Republican Club.

Thomas Caldwell of Dauphin County pledged support to city stand taken by the Philadelphia organization.

The banquet was attended by more than 700 persons. Representative Charles Esterly of Reading also spoke.

Proud Mother!

Verner Wagner, 11, of 5541 Spruce St., Philadelphia, is the picture of health. No wonder his grandmother says: "I'm proud as can be of my little grandson. He's always bright, active, robust.

"I give California Fig Syrup a lot of credit for his wonderful condition. I have used it with him for every little upset or cold. It always has him back to normal in a few hours."

When a child shows, by bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or feverishness, that the little bowels are clogged, you know the system needs a prompt cleansing.

California Fig Syrup does the work quickly and gently. In addition, it helps tone and strengthen weak bowels and stomach. So it gives lasting help.

The word California marks the genuine; the pure vegetable product loved by children and pronounced safe and effective by doctors.

CANDIDATE BAN HIT IN ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 6—(AP.)—Charging that the state Democratic executive committee "illegally attempted" to authorize county Democratic committees to fix qualifications of candidates for county offices, Horace C. Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney, has filed a petition for an injunction to prevent preparations being made in Jefferson county for the Democratic primary August 12.

The action of Wilkinson, a prominent anti-Smith leader in the last general election, was regarded in some political circles here as the first move to test the legality of the ruling of the state committee in barring as candidates for federal, state, district and circuit offices persons who voted for, or actively supported President Hoover during the 1928 campaign.

The state committee left to the several county bodies the right to fix qualifications of county candidates. Since the meeting of the state committee, the Jefferson county committee has adopted a resolution providing that all qualified white electors be permitted to participate in the county primary both as voters and candidates. Wilkinson seeks to restrain County Treasurer M. V. Henry from paying out any money to defray expenses of the primary and to enjoin Probate Judge J. P. Stiles, and Circuit Court Clerk George Whitfield, from appointing election officers.

England Honors Two Dead Fliers

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The Royal Aero Club has awarded posthumously its gold medal to Squadron Leader Jones-Williams and Flight Lieutenant Jenkins, whose attempt at a non-stop flight from England to Cape Town ended disastrously on the Moroccan deserts with the loss of their lives.

Before attempting this flight in December, the two fliers had made a flight from England to India. The award was announced by the Duke of York when he presided over a dinner held by the club last night.

—thousands say. It's wonderful the way soothing, cooling Zemo brings relief to skin which itches and burns. Even in most severe cases, itching disappears almost as soon as Zemo touches the tender and inflamed surface. To draw out local infection and help to clear away unsightly blemishes, we know of nothing better than invisible Zemo. Always keep this family antiseptic on hand. Use it freely. Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition, pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound; known by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

"Nerves Shattered, Run-Down and Depressed. Almost Overnight Flaxolyn Brought Me a New Grip on Health!" Says Merle Snyder, of Pittsburgh

Mr. Merle Snyder, 22 Isabella St., Pittsburgh

"Flaxolyn Certainly Is a Wonderful Tonic"

If your nerves are frayed and you feel all tired-out; if you suffer from a nervous indigestion that upsets you and causes gas, bloating and belching, you will be interested in the case of Mr. Snyder, a popular Pittsburgher.

Headaches and Acid Stomach Corrected

"I have been bothered constantly by the most miserable constipation. It has drawn me down and brought on spells of headaches and sourness that have been awful at times. My food would stay in my stomach like a lump; I would get nervous attacks and fits of gloom. I have used Flaxolyn but a short time and I certainly do feel like an entirely different person. I am in perfect health and am always cheerful and happy. Flaxolyn is a wonderful tonic."

What Is In Flaxolyn?

Flaxolyn is a safe, harmless compound of medicaments which have the approval of the highest authorities.

It is the formula of Dr. Harris H. Lunts (M. D., D. O.), who was for many years a physician in Philadelphia.

In Flaxolyn there are many of the good old-fashioned herbs, including: Licorice Roots from Spain, Sarsaparilla Roots that come from Mexico and South America, Chinese Rhubarb, Buchu Leaves from South Africa, West Indian Ginger, Belgian Valerian, and other seeds, roots, barks and berries.

Flaxolyn clears away the impurities that so often keep the skin sallow, yellowy and dull.

Stomach Gas, Constipation Headaches, Rheumatic Pains, Acid-Dyspepsia, Liver Torpidity Are But a Few of the Conditions Which Respond to the Healthful Influence of Flaxolyn.

At 11:30 o'clock in the William Penn Hotel, Don Bestor will be host to winners in a special 45-minute program to be broadcast by KDKA. Lloyd C. Thomas, commercial manager of all Westinghouse stations, will receive a certificate for KDKA, the station chosen the most popular in the country.

WORK OF ART

The parchment certificates are a work of art. Beautifully engraved in gold and black, the city colors, and containing the signature of Mayor Charles H. Kline and the city seal, they will be real treasures to their owners.

The background of the certificate is the replica of a microphone with the photographs of winning artists super-imposed in the round discs. In a keystone design at the base of the microphone the name of the owner is hand-printed, together with his title and the position he finished in the race.

FANS' EXPRESSION

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Radio Poll, conducted twice a year to permit listeners to express their preferences for artists, announcers and stations, has proved very valuable to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in giving radio fans the kind of news and programs they want. More than 16,777 readers availed themselves of the poll in January. The ballot was printed three times.

Louis L. Kaufman, Walter G. Myers and Frederick G. Rodgers were chosen the most popular announcers. Don Bestor, Dick Powell and Virginia Harmon were chosen the most popular artists.

We Now Present

Allen Thrasher, a bond salesman, is the new voice at WCAE.

Don Woodward is off the "graveyard shift" of KayDee and now handles the day control board in the William Penn studios. Don was stationed at the experimental station in Homewood, where the hours are uncertain, sometimes going until 4 in the morning.

Edgar Guest may speak over WCAE when he comes here, in a few weeks.

Look Lovely Tonight

Sallow, Dingy Skin made Lovely —Coarse Pores become Fine— Stops oily skin, removes blackheads

Cremed Magnesia clears the skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach

The newest discovery in beauty culture is that cremed magnesia beautifies the skin instantly, in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with cremed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face.

It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger.

And because it is so mild, it certainly is a blessing for fine, sensitive skins that soap or easily irritates and coarsens. It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, sallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons.

Test it on those clogged nose pores that stand out so boldly. Let it whiten your neck. It will also keep your hands soft and white. To get genuine cremed magnesia, ask your druggist for Denton's Facial magnesia. Remember, five minutes works wonders. So get your magnesia today and look lovely tonight.

GUARANTEE
It's impossible for Denton's Facial Magnesia not to improve your complexion. But, should it fail to delight you even after the very first application, your dealer is requested to refund your money at once without question.

DENTON'S CREMED
Facial Magnesia

NOTE: Do not hesitate to try this marvelous skin treatment at once. Thousands of delighted women have written they could not believe anything so simple could be so wonderful. But they were convinced when they saw so many friends suddenly get lovely complexions.

7 HURT AS SHIP FIGHTS STORM

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb 6.—(AP)—With five members of her crew and two passengers injured, the Holland-America liner Veendam arrived here, three days overdue, Rotterdam to New York, after battling one of the severest storms on record.

On January 30, the Veendam encountered a storm described by her skipper, Capt. R. W. Braun, as a hurricane. Two hours later a wall of water, which he said was from 80 to 100 feet high, swept over the vessel, from stem to stern, clearing the decks of gear, fittings and lifeboats and virtually wrecking the control bridge. A deckhouse and a section of the promenade rail were smashed, the radio direction finder carried away, compass demolished and the captain's quarters and chart room swept bare. The flying bridge was broken and twisted and number one hatch battered in by the force of the water, flooding the third class quarter.

BROKER CALLED IN DEATH QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS)—James E. Dowd, Chicago broker, today was subpenaed to appear Monday before the federal grand jury investigating the mysterious death here last October of Mrs. Aurelia Fischer Dreyfus.

The death was termed accidental by a coroner's jury after the body had fallen from the balcony of the Potomac Boat Club. Edmund J. McBrian, New York broker, who escorted Mrs. Dreyfus to the club dance testified at the inquest he left Mrs. Dreyfus to go to the cloakroom. When he returned he heard her groans below.

The new inquiry started on demands of the Fischer family. They have declared in affidavits they believed Mrs. Dreyfus was killed because of her knowledge of the investigation in New York of the murder of Miss Dorothy King in 1923. They claimed Mrs. Dreyfus told them she and McBrian swore Albert Guimares, Miss King's admirer, was with them the night of the murder thus establishing an alibi for him.

FIGHT CAR FARE IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The fight of the Public Service Commission to save the people of Baltimore from a 10-cent fare will be carried still further, it was reported, with an attack to be launched against the valuation of $75,000,000 placed on the United Railways Company on which the rate of return gave the dime fare.

The assault on the new rate will be in the hands of John Lewin, people's counsel for the commission, who will seek to have $15,000,000 clipped from the valuation on which the rate of return, 7.44 per cent, as allowed by the Supreme Court of the United States, brought the 10-cent fare.

The attack is based on reported remarks of Justice McReynolds, of the Supreme Court, who, in hearing the case before that high tribunal, declared that the valuation of street railways had decreased since 1924, when the valuation of $75,000,000 was placed on the local concern, due to the decrease in patronage.

CONSIDER THIRD WARD DIVISION

Two plans for the division of the Third Ward into voting districts to be in force when voting machines are installed, were advanced by residents of the ward at a hearing conducted by the redistricting commission last night in Franklin School. William H. Zeifel presided at the meeting.

Nicholas Stabille and Harry Levine, of the ward committee, presented a plan in behalf of Alderman John J. Verona to make the 22 districts into 13 districts. Another plan presented by James Martarella and Benjamin Neaman in behalf of Joseph Engelsberg, Republican ward chairman, would cut the districts from 22 to 12.

The commission, consisting of Zeifel, Attorney N. R. Criss and Charles E. Flinn, took the proposals under advisement.

Two meetings of a sub-committee of the redistricting commission have been announced for next week. The first meeting will be held Tuesday evening in the Homewood Carnegie Library, Thirteenth Ward. On Wednesday, a session is scheduled in the Lockhart School, Twenty-third Ward.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Henry Ford, who last fall entertained Thomas A. Edison at a party in Detroit in connection with the golden anniversary of the invention of the electric light, is to have the favor returned. He has been asked to help celebrate the 83rd birthday of the famous inventor here next Tuesday.

ZONE CHANGES TO BE STUDIED

Three ordinances amending the zoning law will be considered by Council when committee meetings are resumed next week.

Council met yesterday to grant hearings to supporters and objectors to the proposed changes, but none appeared.

One ordinance approved by the City Planning Commission would change property at the southeast corner of McCullough street and Irwin avenue from an "A" residence to a commercial district.

The commission has negatived a bill changing from an "A" residence and a second area district to a commercial and a third area district all property bounded by Sandwich street, an unnamed alley 97 feet west of Norton street, by Gray street and an unnamed alley 70 feet east of Norton street.

The commission also disapproved an ordinance changing from an "A" residence to a commercial district all property between Home Rule street and city-owned lots Nos. 31 to 37 in R. B. Coyle's plan.

BISHOP CHOSEN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The Rt. Rev. Sheldon Munson Griswold, suffragan bishop of Chicago for 13 years, was selected yesterday to fill the bishopric of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Chicago, made vacant by the death of the most Rev. Charles P. Anderson.

Bishop Griswold was first chosen by the clerical delegates to the ninety-third diocesan convention on the fifth ballot. This choice was then approved by the lay delegates, 35½ votes being cast in his favor, one-half a vote more than was necessary for approval.

In the final ballot cast by the clergymen, Bishop Griswold received 56 of the 104 votes cast. Dr. George H. Thomas, of St. Paul's Church, Chicago, received 25, and Dr. George Craig Stewart, of St. Luke's Church, Evanston, 23.

In future conventions laymen will have equal rights with clergymen in elections under an amendment to the diocesan canons.

U. S. TO TEST COAST GUNS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Plans are being perfected, it was revealed today by Secretary of War Hurley, to test American coastal defense guns at their ultimate possible firing range—a range within a few yards of six miles farther than any such gun ever before has been fired. The "eye" of the airplane will make the test possible.

The tests are to be conducted in the Panama Canal Zone during May and June, where there are modern 16-inch guns installed capable of shooting "well beyond 40,000 yards."

To date, however, no tests have been made beyond a range of 30,000 yards.

Under the rules laid down, the aerial observer must spot his target at a height above the range of anti-aircraft guns.

Student Holds Up Store to 'Earn' Tuition Fee

DETROIT, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Leon Gaylor, 23-year-old senior at Michigan State Teachers' College at Ypsilanti, borrowed his room-mate's revolver and came to Detroit to raise money to complete his college course.

Gaylor picked out a shoe store at 414 Michigan avenue, on the edge of the downtown retail district and held up the proprietor. He got only $8, ran out and jumped into a taxi-cab. A policeman on foot chased him through the heavy traffic and overtook him at Washington boulevard and State street.

After first giving another name, Gaylor admitted his identity and told of being "broke" with a $50 note due and a sweetheart whom he would be able to marry if he could complete his course and get a job.

Gaylor's home is at Dryden, Mich.

Malloy, dean of the preparatory school. Two brothers, Sebastian Kaiser and William Kaiser led the third and fourth year scientific classes with averages of 86 and 87 per cent respectively.

J. R. Kunkel

Francis J. Rooney of the first year in the academic course came closest to equaling Kunkel's extremely high mark with an average of 97.8 per cent.

SCHOOL HEADS MAY RESIGN

HASTINGS, Neb., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Administrative officers of Hastings College, a Presbyterian institution, were expected to receive by mail today the resignation of six faculty members.

This action was taking following the resignation yesterday of Dr. W. E. Uphaus, head of the Religious Education Department, who the "sympathy strikers" said, was subjected to "unethical treatment" at the hands of the college administration.

Dr. Uphaus said he would leave tomorrow for New Haven, Conn., to take advantage of a research scholarship awarded him by Yale University.

Dr. Calvin H. French, president of the college, who is in New York, denied knowledge of the sextet's intention to resign, and said that Dr. Uphaus' resignation was entirely voluntary. He said "the situation is being badly distorted in some quarters."

Supporters of Dr. Uphaus said he had been criticized repeatedly and reprimanded by college officials for disseminating among pupils, doctrines termed "extremely liberal and even radical" by trustees.

GAMBLING SEEN AS DEATH CLUE

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Reports of gambling and heavy losses aboard the Coast Guard patrol boat No. 152, at the East Boston base, today opened a new phase in the investigation into the death of Boatswain's Mate Victor L. Harris, whose body was found in his bunk aboard the craft. Harris, according to the official report of the Coast Guard board of inquest, committeed suicide.

According to his widow, only a small part of her husband's pay of $92.50 for a month was found in his clothing.

Coast Guard officials ignored her assertion that her husband was deliberately murdered because he "knew too much" concerning alleged co-operation between guardmen and rum-runners. She declared that Harris was acting as an "undercover" agent and possessed incriminating evidence against some of his comrades.

A half pint of moonshine was confiscated, agents said, in a raid on the home of Rosie Harvey, 32, of 1021 Bustrick way. She was released on her own recognizance.

WE WERE rounding Fifth avenue into Smithfield street when whom should we bump into but a fellow who was rounding Smithfield street into Fifth avenue.

"Well," said the fellow, who happened to be Elim Wheel, "you're just the type I'm looking for."

"Why?" we quizzed.

"Well," said Wheel, "I have a swell item for the paper."

"Go on from there," we said.

"Well," said Wheel, "a good friend of mine asked me to buy a violin string for him the other day. It was, as a matter of fact, Tuesday. And you won't believe this, but the fellow's name was Jones."

"And then what?"

"Well," said Wheel, "Jones is a real good friend of mine, as a matter of fact, and I always liked Tuesday, so I went all over Bellevue trying to buy a violin string. All over Bellevue."

"Well?"

"Well," said Wheel, "I couldn't buy one. There wasn't a single violin string in Bellevue for sale."

"Is there anything else?" we asked.

"No," said Wheel, "that's the item."

"Well, good day," we said.

"So long," said Wheel. "It was a G string."

It was a nature study lesson at Frick Public School.

"What kind of a bird builds its nest in a tree and raps on the 'wood?'" asked the teacher.

One hand. Two hands. Three hands.

"Everybody," she said.

"That's right. And now, what kind of a bird builds its nest in the grass?"

Silence.

"Well, where does grass grow?"

"On a lawn," someone suggested.

"Where could a lawn be?"

"In a field," one genius ventured after much coaxing.

"A pasture," came the answer.

"——and another name for a pasture?"

"A meadow." This without much hesitation.

"Now we're getting warm," said Teacher. "Now, what kind of a bird builds its nest in the grass?"

And the class chorused to a man: "The grasshopper!"

THERE is a Pittsburgh physician with a highly developed sense of humor. Some years ago he lost the sight of one eye. A glass eye now takes its place. Recently the physician purchased two more. One of them is blue. One is black and on the third is painted a miniature U. S. flag. To bewilder his friends he frequently substitutes one for another.

S. S. ILE DE FRANCE, Feb. 6.

THE one person that I have missed on this trip home was Charles E. Hughes. On my last one, no one on the boat will ever forget his cheerful good nature and the whole-souled fellow that he showed himself. When we landed everybody was in favor of giving him the same position in America that Musselini so thoroughly enjoys in his country. I especially missed him last night in the charity entertainment.

He is a fine fellow and smarter, too, than you would think. He is not so much in book learning, but in his rough uncouth native way he will make us a good man on that Supreme Court. And he can't possibly do us any harm, for Supreme Court decisions will always remain the same five against four. When it's six to three that's called unanimous. So good luck to you, Charley.

PORTER'S WAR ON DOPE PRAISED HERE

"CHICKIE"

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Chickie Bryce, only daughter of a devoted father and mother, is attending business college when the story opens. Arthur Sontag, a classmate, takes her to a dance and she confides to her friend, Mary Blake, that the avenues of romance are opening to her. Chickie's father fears the pitfalls ahead of his daughter, but his wife allays his fears.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER II.

NO ONE could understand the music that opened so piercingly in Chickie's heart. Her mother couldn't. She couldn't even whisper it to Jonathan; he would laugh.

She felt herself a being set apart; drifting in a warm, rosy mist.

But she wanted to talk to Mary; it might be that Mary knew of love.

It was Saturday. So many things may happen on a Saturday. She put on her blue sweater with the frilled white collar and cuffs. As she looked into the mirror she smiled dreamily—prettiest girl on the floor—she glanced at herself through Arthur's eyes.

When she kissed her mother, saying, "I suppose Mary and I'll go to the movies," she wondered if Jennie had ever felt as she felt. Had Jennie ever been so all caught up in a lovely haze because of Jonathan whispering in her ear? Jennie, so plump and settled—ah, no!

She walked with the grace of a happy young princess to the ancient two-story, gray house where the Blakes lived.

At Mary's House
Everyone Has Certain Work on Saturday

Saturday was a gray witch of a day in the Blake household; much baking; much sweeping; a regular orgy of scrubbing. Each one had certain work to do. Mary had to sweep the hall and stairs, help make the beds and bake two mammoth cakes to fill the family sweet tooth over Sunday.

Then, provided, of course, as she was fond of saying to Chickie, if one of the infants didn't throw a fit or swallow the buttonhook, she was free.

Mary was somewhat irritable as a matter of habit, for the reason that her brothers and sisters were continually ridiculing her out of all the graces she so admired in Chickie and which she tried to cultivate. But her family insisted that she remain commonplace and sensible. They interferred with her imagination wherein she liked to walk in majesty; one of those terrific, queenly Helens at whose glances men turned to stone.

They had a way of saying: "Ah, come out of it. You're only Mary Blake. You can't fool us with your royal highness airs."

Mary detested this familiarity. She envied Chickie and wished in her heart that fate had made her an only child.

Now, seeing Chickie so fresh and cool, the pretty hair in deep waves and the frilly collar on her sweater, her eyes narrowed: "Gee! You're all dolled, Chickie. But you haven't done another thing all morning. A fat chance you'd have in our house to be anything but a clod. Why, Jimmy even makes fun of me because I round my fingernails, but I notice he thinks points are pretty cute when you wear them.

Mary's Brother
Returns Home Early and Teases Girls

Chickie sighed. Darling old Jimmy! He did think her pretty cute. And he was so good to her and Mary. Didn't he take them to the Orpheum every other week? And waffles afterward!

Jimmy was Mary's older brother . . . twenty-three now. Often on Saturdays he used to come home early before she and Mary were finished with their weekly feast. He would sit on the table, teasing them, grinning at Chickie. Indeed, he was as much her brother as Mary's. Even more, because Mary often flared up furiously at Jimmy, but Chickie always found him adorable.

Now Mary said—"Oh, yes! Darling, indeed! Perhaps you wouldn't think so if you had to darn his socks!"

They went up the wooden steps to the kitchen. A warm sniff of gingerbread floated through the screen door.

Mary cut a huge triangle from the cake she had made. "We might as well eat in peace and quiet before the others come."

They pulled up their chairs. They had just dug their elbows in comfortably when a rich voice called over the hall banisters: "Mary! Mary, dear!"

At the note of hesitation Mary shot a swift, eloquent glance at Chickie, saying in exasperation: "There! Now our plans are spoiled!"

But she answered with inquiring resignation: "Yes, mother, Chickie and I are just having chocolate."

"Lucy phoned."

Mary brought her cup down to the table with a bang. "Lucy! Well, what does she want?"

Lucy's Children
Chickie and Mary Take Them for a Walk

"An hour! Well, for pity sakes, if Lucy Adams thinks I'm going to play nurse girl to her kids every blessed Saturday—"

"Mary! Why, Mary—"

"Well, I don't care! It's not fair, mother. I've just worked like a slave all morning, and now Chickie's waiting for me."

"But she only wants you for an hour."

She waited for Chickie to speak. And Chickie toyed with her cake.

She knew what Mary expected. Yet on this blithe, momentous Saturday, when adventure awaited her on every corner, when she wished to saunter along in the joyous sun chatting with Mary; stopping to look in shop windows; when she wanted most achingly to see Arthur Sontag; to hear what he would say—on this sweet day—she had no wish to trundle the children of Lucy Adams up and down the slumbering, unromantic street.

But Mary sat there waiting for her offer. She gave it.

Inoculating School Children Against Diphtheria

William, just one year old, didn't cry a bit when he was inoculated against diphtheria at Thad Stevens public school, West End. Thousands of Pittsburgh school children were inoculated.

SCHOOLS FIGHT DIPHTHERIA

Thousands of children, ranging from 1 year up, were "shot in the arm" with diphtheria toxin-anti-toxin yesterday in 30 Pittsburgh schools. The injections were given free and will continue throughout this month and next under the direction of Dr. C. B. Maits, of the Department of Public Health.

The clinics will be held each Wednesday between 1 and 3 p. m. Children unaccompanied by parents, Dr. Maits said, must present written authorization from their parents. He asked that children already treated not make application.

SAVES FATHER FROM FUMES

Lawrence Melczak, 63, millworker, of 49 Walsh way, today owes his life to the presence of mind of his daughter, Gertrude, 17, and resuscitation methods of South Side police.

The daughter found her father, a widower, unconscious in bed at their home this morning. A pan of water placed on the gas stove in the bedroom had boiled over, extinguishing the fire, and the fumes had overcome the aged man.

Gertrude ran to the home of Frank Zaborowski, 41 Walsh way, and asked for help. Zaborowski hastened to the Melczak home and began first aid methods on the unconscious man.

The daughter then summoned the South Side police by telephone and called for physicians. A few minutes later police arrived with an inhalator. For 20 minutes Wagonmen Fred Wittman and James Challis, assisted by Lieut. Charles Cahill and Precinct Detective John Harkins worked over the man. He appeared to be dead.

At length Melczak's eyes opened as Dr. C. M. Thomas arrived from the South Side Hospital. "It was a close call," he told police. An hour later he pronounced Melczak out of danger.

Water Leak Cuts Springdale Supply

Due to a leak in the water line leading into the Duquesne Light Company plant at Springdale, homes on six streets in that vicinity find themselves without water today. The pressure was shut off at midnight, but will be resumed late today when the main is repaired. The homes affected are owned by the Light Company.

Woman Held Up, Robbed of Purse

Mrs. Jane Purcell, of 1509 Orchlee street, was held up by two men while she was walking in California avenue near Falck avenue, last night, and robbed of her purse. The bag contained $2.50 in cash and beads valued at $3.50.

Boy Scouts Enlist In Naval Squad

Seventeen Boy Scouts of the East Boroughs Council have "enlisted" in a naval squad organized by council leaders, as part of a plan to form units of "sea scouts" in every district of the council's territory. The unit is complete except for a boat.

Rodger P. Hodgkins, engineer and former seaman, is training the scouts. Class in the rudiments of seamanship are being conducted in the Second United Presbyterian Church, Wilkinsburg. The boys hope that the United States government will supply a training boat by summer. Only experienced sland scouts will be enlisted.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Do you think talking motion pictures will ever supplant the stage as a medium of entertainment?

SALLY KENDIG, actress, Sixth street: "Personally, I don't think the talkies ever will supplant the stage. At present the talking pictures seem to be still a fad, and I am reasonably sure that eventually this medium of dramatic expression will settle itself into a different form of entertainment—separate from the stage. The public has been used to the spoken drama too long to allow anything else to take its place entirely."

Miss Kendig

EDGAR HUNT, Downtown: "I'm hoping for the best and that is that the stage will never be superseded by the talkies or 'squawkies.' The personal presence of the actor or actress on the stage does much to put feeling into the audience—something that is wholly lacking in the talkies. Machinery or canned sound can never supplant the spoken word from a living human being."

Edgar Hunt

HELEN HOWARD, actress, Sixth street: "With the disappearance of the stage, I am sure that a lot of our social life would disappear. Most of the elite consider it a great social occasion to attend the theater, and for that reason would be reluctant to allow this medium to go into oblivion. Drama has been too popular for hundreds of years to go into disrepute at the instigation of talking movies. The sound is too unnatural at present to be even considered a menace to the stage."

Miss Howard

ELSA WESLYN, Downtown: "Yes, I am afraid that in time the talkies will take the place of the stage in a way. One can see that the screen is becoming increasingly popular day by day and that lack of interest is being shown in many stage productions from many quarters. But still the spoken word has been a medium of expression for centuries and I doubt whether this can be supplanted by an upstart without a good 'fight.' However, anything's possible in the machine age."

Miss Weslyn

KATHLEEN LA DELL, entertainer, Downtown: "Although the talkies are extremely popular right now, I have no reason to believe that they will ever supersede the stage. The stage and screen are two forms of expression, wholly separate, and after the fall of the speaking pictures wears off, the stage will continue to be one form of expression and the screen the other. Actors and actresses have little to worry about from this threat."

Miss La Dell

JAMES McWILLIAMS, manager, Downtown: "I have followed the stage for many years and I have been a close student of the motion picture. From my own observations I don't think the stage will have to worry a whole lot about being thrown into discard. The public wants to see its heroes and heroines in the flesh and not in a silver sheet, uttering words that are for the most part hardly understandable."

Mr. McWilliams

BILLS GIVEN PHYSICIANS' BACKING

Medical Society Official, Maits, Duffy and Woman Crusader Approve Curb

Pittsburgh applauds the new blow aimed by Representative Stephen G. Porter at the dope ring. Approval came from many quarters today for his bills for the regulation of traffic in opium and cocaine.

Dr. Robert L. Anderson, chairman of the Allegheny County Medical Society's Committee on public health legislation, said:

"Representative Porter has made the most exhaustive study of the narcotic situation of anyone in his position. He knows more about it than any other layman. His views should receive very deep consideration. Any effort to curtail indulgence in narcotics should be supported to the limit by everyone in position to do so.

DOCTORS AID DRIVE

"It is my impression that the medical profession, while conscious of the increasing number of the objectionable regulations now in vogue, has always made and always will make a determined effort to stamp out this evil.

"It is estimated there are 1,000,000 narcotic addicts in this country. There are, I believe, 323,000 people who are registered to handle narcotics in some form. Of these 323,000, it is estimated that 2,000 are addicts themselves. The percentage of those with free access to narcotics who are addicted to them is accordingly lower than the percentage of addicts in the general public. Of the 323,000 persons registered to handle narcotics, about 100,000 are physicians. I call attention to this to show that the percentage of addicts among the medical profession is very small as compared with the general average."

BACKS PORTER PLAN

Dr. C. B. Maits, director of public health, said:

"There is no question that all the reputable physicians of the country favor any reasonable measures which will eliminate the drug habit. Representative Porter's bill for the creation of a Bureau of Narcotics with a

IN DETROIT, the principal Western Union office was held up by eight gangsters. This is the first time anyone walked into a Western Union office with less than 10 words in their mind. These boys used just three, "Stick 'Em Up." What a message!

Here is a warning to automobile sheiks. James Ambrose, of Madison, Wis., will have to spend a year in jail because he forced a girl to walk home from an automobile ride. If this keeps up, Congress will have to appropriate more money for prisons than they now have in mind. While we are on the subject, there should be a law passed to punish any girl who accepts an automobile ride from a strange man.

Sir Alfred Knox, in London, yesterday asked the president of the Board of Trade, to limit the import of talkies from America. He said, "It would protect the language and ideas of the people of England." Now, my dear Sir Alfred, you don't actually believe that George Arliss in a talkie would hurt the king's English or Ronald Colman and his fine modulated voice could offend his English listeners? Have you heard Fairbanks and Pickford in "The Taming of the Shrew?" As for Clara Bow and the other little Hollywood girls, their pictures are made for the eye and so they should be seen and not heard.

General Electric Company officials claim a new radio broadcasting record. A program broadcast from Schenectady was picked up in Sydney, Australia, and rebroadcast to Schenectady. It's a small world and proves that no matter where you live—you cannot get away from Rudy Vallee.

PITT INITIATES COED FRESHMEN

Another band of freshmen women at the University of Pittsburgh had their first taste of college customs and life at a luncheon yesterday afternoon in the Heinz House.

The luncheon, given every semester by Thyrsa W. Amos, dean of women, allows the new students to become acquainted with their masters—the upper classmen, referred to on the campus as "big sisters." The "big sisters" pinned green arm bands on "little sisters" yesterday. They hurried to explain, though, that the arm band was not intended to impart an inferiority complex to its wearer, but rather to aid the freshman girl in meeting her college problems.

When the arm bands had become a part of the freshmen's dress and the luncheon, consisting of a fish salad and ice cream, had been consumed, Dean Amos delivered an address of welcome. The presidents of the various women organization on the campus also welcomed the freshmen girls.

ZONING BEATEN IN MT. LEBANON

Bernarth Herskovitz has won his fight to erect a six-story apartment building in Beverly Place, Mt. Lebanon, the State Supreme Court yesterday deciding in his favor.

Judge Elder W. Marshall recently sustained the board of adjustment in granting Herskovitz a permit. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, which has sustained Judge Marshall.

Last year Herskovitz obtained a permit for the foundation of the building. A controversy arose, the township finally instructing Building Inspector G. I. Irwin to revoke the permit. The commissioners then set about to pass a zoning ordinance. Herskovitz appealed to the board of adjustment, which granted him a permit on the ground that when the original permit was awarded, the zoning ordinance was not effective.

The thoroughfare in which Herskovitz desires to erect the apartment, is in a multiple family dwelling district.

medical advisory committee is a good step in that direction and I approve of it.

"As to the other bill, I would like to give it more thought before making a definite statement. Great care should be taken not to impose hardships on legitimate practitioners in the conduct of their professional work, through any miscarriage of justice.

"Of course, any doctor who lends himself to the illicit drug traffic deserves punishment — and severe punishment."

William T. Duffy, in charge of the Pittsburgh office of the Narcotic Division, Treasury Department, which has to do with enforcement of the Harrison narcotic act, said:

"I am unqualifiedly in favor of both bills."

WOMEN'S AID URGED

Mrs. Philip B. Benz, of 2201 Brownsville road, who has been crusading through the women's clubs against the narcotic traffic for four years and had the narcotic exhibit at the American Home Exposition in the South Side Market last September, said:

"I strongly hope that Mr. Porter's bills will be passed. I hope the women's clubs will give their support. The narcotic traffic is a vicious thing, the seriousness of which few people seem to realize. Its suppression is of vital importance."

Dr. Philip B. Benz, a dentist, likewise indorsed the bills. He said he had not used habit-forming narcotics in his professional work for 12 years, as substitutes were available which were just as efficacious. Novocaine, which is not a habit-forming drug, is a more valuable anesthetic in dental operations than cocaine, Dr. Benz asserted.

210 CASES TRIED IN JANUARY

Judge Harry H. Rowand, presiding in Criminal Court, has compiled a report showing that during January 210 cases were tried, 150 pleas of guilty heard and 55 were non-suited. In the trials 95 were convicted and 115 acquitted, making a total with the pleas of 245 guilty.

Prison sentences were imposed upon the guilty totaling 316 to 660 years, and there was one life sentence on a plea of murder. Four youths were sent to Morganza and 11 to Huntingdon. As most of the pleas of guilty were heard by Judge Rowand, he imposed sentences totaling 144 to 322 years. Visiting Judge C. M. Culver meted out 40 to 87 years, Judge William T. Darr 50 to 100 years, and Judge J. Frank Graff 44 to 89 years. Several other judges imposed a few years each.

TWO JUSTICES, FATHER, SON

A father and son, the younger a student in the University of Pittsburgh Law School, and the older a signal and telegraph maintenance man for the Pennsylvania Railroad for the last 26 years, both hold the office of justice of the peace in Aspinwall borough.

They are John C. Parkhill, the father, and Ralph Parkhill, the son. Both have joint offices at 305 Freeport avenue, Aspinwall, and when one is busy the other holds hearings or vice versa.

The younger Parkhill, who is a World War veteran, having served in France with the Three Hundred and Thirty-fifth Field Hospital Corps, first served an unexpired term as justice. Two years ago he was elected to the office. He still has four more years to serve.

The elder Parkhill was elected last November at the general elections to succeed William Ludwig, of Aspinwall. Parkhill has six years to go.

The younger Parkhill has been enrolled at Pitt for 2½ years and will graduate within the next 18 months. He is married.

Two justices of the peace are required by law in every borough and the Parkhills say they "have it all in the family." The elder Parkhill resides at 33 Fifth street, Aspinwall, and his son at 204 Emerson avenue.

OFFICER SEEKS NEW TRIAL

Joseph I. Zuby, 30, of 807 Locust street, a patrolman at Central Police Station, is free today under $2,000 bond pending application for a new trial. He was found guilty, along with Patrolman John Jones, also of Central Station, of larceny of the revolver, mace and uniform overcoat of A. P. Morris, another policeman. Another case against Zuby is to go before the grand jury Friday, a charge of assault and battery preferred by Alfred Carter.

A little less than a year ago, court records show, Zuby completed a parole of one year and made the final payment on $900 to William MacVittie, 1911 Lookout street, Troy Hill, after Zuby had been found guilty of aggravated assault and battery when he was alleged to have seriously beaten MacVittie with his mace.

Man Cut, Another Shot in Pool Room

Fifty stitches were required to close a gash in the throat of James Martin, 30, a Negro, of 1221 Wylie avenue, who police say, was slashed by Arnold T. Bee, 33, a Negro, of 1015 Ivanhoe street, in a pool room at Wylie avenue and Elm street early today. Police say Bee entered the establishment and without warning slashed Martin. Joseph Zasteroff, 60, Negro, of 79 Elm street, an employe in the establishment, is said to have fired a revolver at Bee but the bullet struck John Smith, 48, a Negro of "city," in the right leg. Smith is in the Passavant Hospital and the others under arrest at the Center Avenue police station.

Finder Deposits Lost $100 for Its Owner

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 5.—(AP.)—Money lost on the streets in this city is as good as in the bank.

G. E. Seal handed $100 to a friend on the street yesterday to deposit in the bank for him. Later Frank W. Parsons called him on the telephone.

"If you find you've lost $100 don't let it worry you," he told Seal. "I found it in your bankbook on the street and deposited it in your name at your bank."

BEEBE TO HOLD HILL FIGHT QUIZ

Police Inspector Albert Beebe today promised to investigate reports that Constable Jack Schneider, Republican chairman of the First Ward; Ike Polis, former constable, and James Kelly, one of Schneider's followers, had been arrested in a Hill district fight early today and later released without explanation.

Patrolman John Nowack was injured so severely in the fight that a dozen stitches were necessary to close the wounds, but Beebe explained that in the confusion one of Nowack's brother-patrolmen hit him with a mace.

This is the report Beebe said he received of the fight:

Lieut. Jack Lavery and police raided a club at 1341 Fifth avenue. After the raid police and a dozen men fought in Our alley. Maces were swung freely.

In Center Avenue Police Court Magistrate Rothenberg held Dan O'Brien, 21, as the proprietor of the place. Two visitors were discharged. Police told of finding liquor there.

"I've heard rumors that Schneider, Polis and Kelly were in the fight," Beebe said. "If they were I'll file information against them for assault and battery."

The report to Beebe from Hill police did not mention the three men.

LIQUOR TURNS INTO WATER

That $45 had been paid for 15 gallons of water under the impression that it was moonshine liquor, developed in Criminal Court.

William McWilliams, of Arthur street, was acquitted of an indictment charging violation of the Snyder act when the jury learned the details. Robert Wright, of Rose street, was paroled after he had pleaded guilty and testified in the McWilliams case, before Judge Frank P. Patterson.

The evidence was that McWilliams and Wright went to a football game at Coverdale December 10, where they gave a man a taste of liquor from a bottle and offered to supply him with five gallon cans of it at $15 each. He ordered three. Wright said two of the cans delivered contained only water while the third, besides water, had a tube fixed to the stopper so that the customer could dip his finger down and find whisky. Only the tube contained whisky. Wright said he carried the doctored can while Williams carried the cans of water.

PITT BEAUTIES IN CONTEST

A beauty contest, sponsored by The Owl, University of Pittsburgh year book, has descended on the mountainous Pitt campus.

The search for elusive beauty began yesterday afternoon when the Pitt Weekly, student newspaper, announced in its columns that the Owl's staff was conducting such a contest through the medium of the weekly paper.

In the issue of the paper was found a blank in which students could list five girls whom they consider the most beautiful on the campus. Ballot boxes have been provided in Alumni and State Hall to receive the names of the beauties.

The five girls receiving the largest number of votes in the Owl's pulchritude contest will see their pictures spread in the Owl beauty section, being run for the first time in the history of the year book.

If the sorority girls make a mad break for the beauty parlors to prepare for the contest they will find non-sorority girls there, too, for the non-sorority girls are also allowed to get their pictures in the Owl—providing, of course, they have the looks.

LINDY IS COOK IN GLIDER CAMP

LINDBERGH CAMP, Cal., Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today was installed as camp cook at this glider headquarters, which resembles a cowboy's overnight camp in the mountains.

Today from a nearby mountain peak, Hawley Bowlus, American glider champion, planned to take off in an effort to break the world endurance record for motorless flights by soaring more than 15 hours. Lindbergh was named by William Van Dusen, official N. A. A. observer, as his assistant timer and judge.

The camp was moved farther up the mountain in order to take advantage of better air currents. Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, riding in a big black sedan, broke a path through the trackless oak brush for the truck and trailer carrying Bowlus' glider.

The camp consists of a small tent, two cots and a hole in the ground for a cook stove.

Lindbergh has been frying ham and making flapjacks and coffee just like any other cow-camp cook.

They disclaimed ownership of the contraband.

Mrs. Elizabeth Toomey was fined $200 and placed on one year probation when she pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition law by selling liquor and maintaining a common nuisance at 1013 Bedford avenue. The court ruled that the fine must be paid within the period of probation. 200,000 Children Win Trophy for Pittsburgh

The efficient work of 200,000 city and county school children in the national "Clean Up, Paint Up, Plant Up" campaign sponsored here by the Chamber of Commerce last spring, has won the state trophy for Pittsburgh, according to the decision of the national judges in New York, wired yesterday to T. C. Foley, secretary of the campaign.

The silver trophy was earned by pupils of Allegheny County schools by cleaning 9,188 streets and alleys, 38,839 back yards and 35,000 basements of rubbish and debris and installing at least 28,000 flower boxes in homes.

In their decision, it was said, the judges took into consideration that the school children received more than $15,000 for junk and paper collected and sold, as well as their removal of 55,000 rubbish and ash piles, and the destruction of 34,900 rats and 14,600 breeding places of insects.

In the report which was submitted to the national judges by the Pittsburgh Chamber, there was proof that in Allegheny County in one week's time, school children planted 35,719 new trees, repaired 16,951 leaks in faucets, painted 13,714 homes and cleaned and papered no less than 63,324 rooms. More than 11,000 fences were painted by pupils who cleaned the wall-paper in 85,000 rooms.

Man Loses Citizenship Over Making Liquor

Mike Rendulich, 36, a Croatian, of Mt. Morris, Greene County, was ordered to surrender his certificate of naturalization for cancellation and pay a $250 fine, by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson, when he pleaded guilty of making false statements in his final petition for citizenship, November 7, 1927.

In his final examination before a naturalization examiner Rendulich described himself to be of good moral character and never arrested or charged with any violations of the law. He was admitted to citizenship in the Federal District Court.

The indictment to which he pleaded recorded that he was arrested April 5, 1926, for manufacturing liquor, and that he had pleaded guilty to the charge in the Greene County Court and sentenced to serve three months in jail and pay a $500 fine.

He came to this country in 1912 and has been working as a farmer in Greene County.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Dons Skates for Charity

YOUNG folks, old folks, everybody went to the roller skating party, and had a lot of fun last night in Motor Square Garden. And never was charity merrier. Of course you know the Junior Auxiliary of the Allegheny General Hospital gave the event for the benefit of the hospital.

Society folks can all ride, and play golf and tennis, and swim, and do specialty dancing, and ever so many other things perfectly, everyone knows, but not very many could roller skate before last night. And they all had a marvelous time learning with an old-time orchestra playing melodies with a swing to them.

Those who were afraid to venture far on the treacherous skates filled the spectators' benches and were having a thoroughly enjoyable evening watching their friends' efforts to master the sport of roller skating.

And there were hot wieners and buns and coffee for the willing skaters. It was probably one of the most informal and amusing parties given for some time.

The skaters and the spectators looked very smart in their gay-colored sports costumes. And nearly all the members of the younger set and the younger married folks were there with some of their elders watching the hilarity.

I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Joseph M. Scribner wearing a brown crepe dress and a brown cloth coat with a snug fitting felt hat of the same shade. And Mrs. John Bissell was there in a knitted costume of beige with a brown felt hat, and Frances Forsyth, who was chairman of the debutante committee, chose a smart suit of wine-red wool with a small geometric figure in black. And her hat was of black felt. Skating with her was Harriet Pickes in a pearl grey ensemble with a dahlia felt hat.

Having an exciting time learning to skate was Louise Evans, who wore a three-piece suit of black crepe with a blouse of eggshell and scarlet, and a smart black felt hat.

Whirling around the rink was Mrs. James I. McKay, in a trim green jersey frock, and I caught sight of Jane Allderdice sitting with a group of friends on the fence around the rink.

And Mary McClung in a beige sport costume I saw and Nancy Brown in a striped knitted gown of three different shades of green, and Grace Rowley in a beige crepe ensemble. And Frances Fitzgerald wore a black crepe gown with a navel collar in white and a black felt hat.

Another bud of the season there was Margaret Rolfe Berger in a navy blue jersey ensemble with a blouse of blue and white printed silk and a navy felt hat.

Very piquant looked Elizabeth Leovy in a cherry red suit of jersey and a gay felt hat to match. And her sister, Helen, wore a black and Liberty blue crepe ensemble with inserts of the blue in the front of the skirt and the blue making the blouse.

Arriving later I noticed Mrs. George H. Love in a King's blue satin gown and a hat to match. And she was wrapped in a coat of sables.

A knitted ensemble in green was worn by Clarissa Reed with a green felt hat. Betty Charters was in pearl gray with a dahlia hat, and Mary Lewis wore a smart orange and cinnamon brown knitted dress, and Phyllis Person wore a red ensemble.

Others there were Mrs. Gail Landon, Jr., and Mrs. Eugene Kipp, and Mrs. Samuel Adams, Jr.

And I saw Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland in a sports suit of light rust wool, and Mrs. Frederick G. Gwinner and Mrs. Harvey Childs, III, in a deep purple tweed sports dress.

The Harris Havilands, of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, and Paul Haviland were with Clarissa Reed. And another I caught a glimpse of as she skated by was Margaret Stewart in a gray sweater with figures in black, and a skirt of gray.

And among the skaters were Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones, III, with Mrs. Jones wearing a suit of orange jersey and a fabric hat.

Phyllis Totten I saw arriving and she wore a leopard skin coat and a green felt hat. And her dress was a green sports model.

Mrs. John Hart Wilson wore a beige knitted dress with a toque of the same fabric, and Mrs. William Mitchell, a blue knitted dress and a raccoon coat.

Mrs. George Kennedy chose a smart suit of black broadcloth with a scarf collar of black broadtail and a black felt hat.

A bud of the early winter at the party last night was Melus Rhodes who had a gray tweed coat and a scarlet knitted dress and a felt hat in the same shade.

Very interesting was Mrs. Gordon King's costume. Her skirt was of heavy bay green knitted material and her sweater was a lighter shade of green with a small pattern in orange. And she had a green felt hat.

And I noticed Mrs. Allen T. Gordon wearing a red and beige ensemble, with a hat of red felt, and Virginia Goldsbury, who was chairman of the event, in a jersey gown with a dark red skirt and a sweater blouse of scarlet, and dark blue and white.

As I was leaving I saw the Reginald Macdonalds arriving. Mrs. Macdonald had a wine-red satin gown and felt hat and a coat of black lamb's wool.

Rosamound Fitch chose a deep rose flannel gown with a hat to match, and Betty Scott yellow and black jersey with a black felt hat, and her sister Anne king blue wool crepe and black hat. And Mrs. Henry O'Neil wore a two-piece blue costume, and Mrs. Samuel Clarke Reed, Jr., olive green.

And I noticed Mrs. Arthur P. Woolfolk wearing a grey dress and felt hat of black, and Josephine O'Neil in rose and beige knitted ensemble. And Mary Oliver and Mrs. Alexander L. Robinson were among the spectators.

Fortnightly Has Clever Program

THE Woman's Fortnightly Review of Mt. Lebanon has had many clever and original programs, but certainly none that exceeded in either quality the "vitamin valentine party" given yesterday. In a less original organization it would have been merely another home economics day. But what a day those Fortnightly Reviewers made of it! To begin with, they held their meeting in a kitchen, if you please, a very lovely kitchen, to be sure, one might even say a very beautiful—all ivory and green and dainty—in Mrs. Albert A. Buehn's new home in Jefferson drive.

Into that kitchen came Mrs. W. E. McKnight, kimona-clad, yawning, and unwilling, ostensibly to prepare a meal, but in reality to talk of "Home Economics at the Crossroads," and to observe that the time will shortly be here when it will be no more appropriate to say "only a lawyer" than to say "only a housekeeper." Through the kitchen door entered Mrs. H. B. Long, and under the guise of neighborly chatter the two women discussed household appliances and diet, ultimately agreeing that it is "the vitamins that put vim in your victuals."

A third neighbor, Mrs. John McKelvie, dropped in, fired with arguments in favor of "Delicatessen Husbands" and plans for "debunking the kitchen of its glory" and turning it into a music room or library. "Don't be the covered wagon of 1930," she tells the unwilling cook. Personal allusions, especially to the husbands of members, added much humor to the program, and another touch of humor was to be found in the heart-adorned signs which decorated the kitchen such as "Taste Makes Waist."

The vitamin idea was extended even to the refreshments, deliciously dainty and uniquely served in decorated paper bags, and all the achievements of Mrs. Hugh M. Patton's program committee.

THE BACK OF THE MODE PRESENTED BY STYLISTS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The back of the mode continues to offer the most interesting vantage point from which to observe the original treatments meted out by the couturiers to deserving evening frocks. The front of the frock is often left undisturbed in its austere simplicity, and the back gets all the benefit of the designer's genius.

This is one of the features carried over from last year and will obtain as long as we are under the rule of the princess line, a kindly rule indeed.

LACE continues to hold us all willing prisoners in its delicate mesh. Much Chantilly and Spanish lace is used to make some exquisite dresses, the fine weave of Chantilly lending itself to the fashioning of especially lovely creations. Lace combined with chiffon and tulle is much liked for evening wear and was represented in almost every mid-season collection designed for both resort and urban wear. Crepe georgette and crepe romain are two other materials that are increasing their hold on the affections of La Mode and are a delightful compromise between heavy and extremely sheer fabrics. Velvet is not seen so much as it was earlier in the season, nor was it importantly represented in the latest collections.

WE show a frock today that was sketched at Ciro's and worn by a tall slim woman of Titian coloring. It is a Patou model in light green crepe romain with a double cape back and a snugly fitting skirt ending in circular godets touching the floor in back and reaching to the ankle in back. The decolletage is V-shaped at both front and back and the natural waistline is marked by a set-in belt fastening with an emerald and crystal buckle in front.

* * *

THE second frock is also shown in back view because of interesting detail and treatment. It is a Lenief model and is of black Chantilly lace and tulle. The decolletage in back is interesting in cut, a scalloped effect outlining the back with two thread-like links joining the opposite points from side to side. Little amusing wing-pieces are placed at the top of either shoulder. The flaring tulle bordered skirt is set on to a deep V-shaped yoke.

LEIBER PLAYS ONE VILLAIN AND ONE HYPOCRITE THE SAME DAY

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Some people think triangles were discovered by Ibsen, and that he also invented psychology, while we owe the well made play to Sardou. That's because "Othello" is not played very often. It has not been seen in Pittsburgh since Mantell dropped it from his repertoire, partly because it required volcanic vitality and partly because he had no satisfactory Iago after Leiber left. For this is one of those plays in which the star often does not know which part to take, another reason why stars have mostly ignored it.

George Seibel

Fritz Leiber plays Iago, and makes Iago the stellar role. As he plays it his audience gradually awakes to the fact that there was psychology before Ibsen, and that the well-known play is not a French importation.

It was the most gripping and moving presentation of the week at the Alvin. For in "Othello" Shakespeare has given us hardly a gleam of comedy—no Gravediggers as in "Hamlet," no Porter as in "Macbeth." It is the drama of jealousy and murder, of innocence slandered and done to death by villainy, of despair and suicide.

"Chaos is come again," says Othello, and indeed there is no ray of hope in this desolate and tremendous tragedy.

Louis Leon Hall was Othello and gave a satisfactory reading—though this part requires a leonine and explosive passion few actors can evoke. I have seen no perfect Othello since the elder Salvini at old Library Hall.

With intelligent reading by every one in the cast, with truly gorgeous costumes and impressive scenery—not futuristic aside from the curtain—this was a production that amply rewarded those who saw it. Here is a play whose structure no Sardou could improve, whose psychology no Ibsen or O'Neill could equal—well done by a competent company of players.

Villainy As An Art

But for that we saw villainy raised to a fine art last night by Fritz Leiber as Iago. This villain has as little cause to be a villain as any villain ever had. He gives some reasons for his villainy, yet he can hardly believe them himself.

Shakespeare has here presented us with the first psychological villain—one who is a villain because he is bored, because he is envious, because his fertile brain must hatch mischief. He has a "complex."

The quietness with which Leiber infuses most of his scenes gives them their diabolical force. He is almost Mephistophelian in his craft. As he plays the part it becomes comprehensible—this cold, calculating, callous cur.

Over against Iago must be set the incandescent purity of Desdemona, the slandered wife. Virginia Bronson achieves a notable triumph. Her realism in the last scene, when she is to be murdered, is convincing. Some of the softer scenes which used to wring pity from the hearts of the audience have been cut. They are not missed very much—for Desdemona after all is a bit stupid despite her sweetness, as the Moor is a bit stupid despite his honesty, or Iago's villainy would not have been clever enough.

Good work was also done by Kathryn Collier as Emilia, though her death is awkward. And James Neill gave an appropriate air of fatuity to Roderigo.

Romance in Illyria

The afternoon had been spent by Leiber and his company in the pleasant climate of Illyria, where the people are much more agreeable than those troublesome Venetians. "Twelfth Night" is romance and comedy—romance rich in poetry, comedy rich in satire.

Malvolio, the part played by Leiber, is the typical Puritan—and Leiber puts in a few touches to show him as the typical hypocrite. When he reappears, after the drunken revelers are stretched on the floor, and drains a bowl of their punch, he has annotated Shakespeare by the psychology of "suppressed desires."

There are many other touches in this unconventional presentation that give new life to the rare old comedy. But they do not squeeze out the poetry.—Hart Jenks as the Duke and Vera Allen as Viola were particularly happy in catching the music of their lines. Sir Toby, played by Lawrence H. Cecil, and Sir Andrew, played by James Neill, made excellent comedy foils.

Sothern was a capital Malvolio, but Leiber is even a better, for he is more of a waggish pretender, where Sothern was the somber pedant sick of self-love.

PLAY OF WAR COMING TO ALVIN

Seats are now on sale at the Alvin box office for the engagement commencing Monday night, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, of R. C. Sherriff's sensational war play, "Journey's End," which has had such successful runs in New York and Chicago. There are now six companies presenting this play throughout the United States.

Seats are now on sale at the Nixon box office for an engagement of "The Vagabond King," which opens in the Nixon Monday night.

Harland Tucker, who will play the outstanding role in "The Ghost Train" in the Pitt next week, first saw the play in London before it was brought to this country by A. H. Woods. Mr. Tucker is authority for the statement that London audiences went wild over the play.

William Boyd comes to the Stanley tomorrow in the talkie, "His First Command," heralded as a romantic comedy of army life. On the stage, as his Warner-Publix Unit presentation, Dick Powell will offer "Bombay."

"The Aviator," a film comedy of flying, comes to the Enright tomorrow. Patsy Ruth Miller, Edward Everett Horton, Johnny Arthur and Lee Moran are in the leading roles. On the stage Jay Mills will present "Topsy Turvy."

Victor McLaglen heads the cast in the Fox all-talk special, "Hot for Paris," which comes to the Penn Monday. El Brendel, Fifi Dorsay and Polly Moran also are featured.

COLLIER, SR, COMES

The Harris stage show, beginning Saturday, will be "Garden of Roses." Willie Collier, Sr., in "Harmony at Home," will appear on the talk screen.

"No, No, Nanette" will open in the Warner Saturday with Bernice Claire, Alexander Gray, Lucien Littlefield, Bert Roach, Louise Fazenda and Lilyan Tashman in the cast. The picture, besides being all talking, has many scenes in technicolor.

AFRICAN JUNGLES STAY

"Jango," picturization of wild animal and human life in the jungles of West Africa, will begin a second week in the Gayety Saturday. Performances are twice daily—at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m.

Mae Murray talks on the screen for the first time in "Peacock Alley" the Tiffany all-talking production, which will open a second week in the Olympic Saturday.

Polly Walker makes her screen debut in "Hit the Deck," which will begin a second week in the Sheridan Square Saturday. In New York she was the original "Palm Beach Girl" in the Follies. She was also starred by George M. Cohan in "Billie" and "The Merry Malones." She hails from Chicago.

'Tis The War

Grim war makes grim faces as this closeup of Henry Von Zynda, who plays one of the soldiers in "Journey's End," coming to the Alvin Monday, demonstrates.

Speckled Fawn Strolls Streets Of Ligonier

Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.

Protest

SINCE other lads awake and wash and dress,
To wear a mask and answer "No" and "Yes,"
Or hold your tongue till you are spoken to,
I doubt if anyone can read my heart,
But if they could it's little that I'd care;
Since you decided it was best to part,
I've found the world a bit too much to bear.

Each night I see the lovers down my street;
I hear their laughter, tremulous and gay;
I feel the torture of an old defeat
And wonder at the price I have to pay.
I know of far more pleasant things to do
Than hear a clock strike all the long night through!

—No One Else But.

GAG

WHAT is said to be the most recent Hollywood gag comes from Herbert Cruikshank and concerns another cinema magnate "with a dialect," whose company had just completed an extravagant epic christened "East Is West." Many of the scenes were shot in China, although much of the picture was snapped in New York.

After witnessing the film's preview, the magnate was glum. "What's the matter, don't you like it?" he was asked.

"I ken't say dot I do," he replied.

"But how did you like the Occidental scenes?"

"Dey were as rotten as the ones done on potpuss."

OUCH!

Capt. Irving O'Hay, soldier of fortune and after-dinner talker, was among the speakers at the Baseball Writers' dinner, held in the Hotel Commodore. The Captain delivered a lengthy talk and then Bugs Baer, the King of Belittlers, got up.

"Like my good friend, Capt. O'Hay," flipped Baer, "I'll say nothing—but I'll say it LOUD!"

COINCIDENCE, OR BURN UP?

THE new Broadway columnist in the current Collitchumor tells an amusing yarn about Norma Terris, ex-wife of Max Hoffman, Jr., son of the famous dancer, Gertrude Hoffman. When they were divorced Norma went to California to appear in the films. When friends from New York introduced her as Norma Hoffman, Norma was furious. "I'm tired of that name," she is reported to have bellowed, "I hope I never hear it again."

Imagine the explosion when she discovered that the name of the heroine she was hired to portray in her first picture was "Norma Hoffman."

A FORM OF CRITICISM

It was in one of the fancier night places and a Continental type, with exaggerated sideburns and a serious look, was being fawned over by neglected matrons. "See that clunk?" chirped a Broadway spender as he pointed to the gigolo. "Well, I just named my cat after him because my cat is yellow, dirty, and women are always feeding him."

MERCILESS TRUTHS

TAKE them from Izzy Elinson, who probably took them himself, a redeeming feature of the increased phone rate is that it will do away with the clown who for 15 minutes wants you to guess who this is. . . . A glass building will soon be erected in New York. Kids will travel miles just to play ball on that block.

OF ALL ARGUMENTS!

Among the major disappointments of the week was that suffered by a young sports writer. Weary of recording roughneck events, the scribe appealed to the boss to be given a job interviewing cinema people. The chief promised him the first opening in the picture department. The following day, however, the sports scrivener was pained to learn that a young lady had just joined the rag's moon pitcher staff. He spilled his grievance to the chief.

"If you hadn't promised me that job," he said, "I wouldn't have wasted so much time equipping myself for it."

"But," protested the boss, "what preparation is necessary for that job?"

HEHEHEH

IT IS supposed to have happened in a certain dialectician's dwelling in the Bronx. A foursome of garment manufacturers were playing auction pinochle and Moe Ginsberg, who had dropped all his coin, prepared to go home. He located his overcoat in the bedroom but for the life of him couldn't find his hat. The host's youngster, Sammy, went into spasms of laughter watching Ginsberg search for his missing chapeau. The irritated Ginsberg evened matters by thrashing the annoying child. "For wot are you hitting such a baby?" cried the irate father.

"I'm looking furr mine het," replied the aggravated one, "and hizz leffing on me!"

"SELF-CONFIDENCE starts Behind the Scenes"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Answering PITTSBURGH Girl's Letter

Happy self-confidence of charm is within your grasp, through a simple secret

"HOW can I be popular?" . . . Again and again girls ask me that question.

For instance, read this from Sally M's letter:

"I am a young girl, considered beautiful, but I am always shy at a party. Other girls not any prettier are always being invited out, while I am overlooked . . ."

Perhaps I can help you, Sally, because the mysterious power to charm lies within yourself. Men are like mirrors. They reflect a girl's own conception of herself. If she is poised, self-confident, sure of her charm, they hover round like bees around summer flowers.

Clothes are Important

Clothes are very important in giving a girl this happy self-confidence. If everything she wears is DAINTY and COLORFUL, a girl feels charming and therefore she is charming.

Begin behind the scenes, Sally, with your lingerie, stockings, all your intimate things. When these are dainty, lace-trimmed, colorful, they make you feel very feminine, very charming.

With this self-confidence you go out ready to conquer the world, and you do.

But some girls say they cannot afford to wear lovely underthings every day. Frequent washing takes some of the color and charm out of the garment.

This is very foolish, for if a girl but use that invaluable product, Lux, her daintiest things will stay as alluring as new, so long that the most modest budget can well afford them. This product is especially made to keep colors and textures as charming as new. Anything safe in plain water alone is just as safe in Lux.

And in Your Home, Too

(Left) After 12 Lux washings—every thread in place—silk and lace fibres intact, color intact. Retains all the charm it had when new.

(Right) After 12 washings with an ordinary good soap—silk fibres a little out of place—lace damaged. Lustre impaired, color dull.

It's Safe in LUX!

WHEN ALICE WHITE SAYS SHE MAY BUY DOG, JOE TELLS STORY

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright 1930 — Premier Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.

IT started apropos of Alice White saying she was going to get a shepherd dog.

"Didja hear the one Joe Frisco tells?" we were asked. "Frisco was spotted walking a canine down the street."

"'Hey, what kinda dog is that?' a friend queried.

"'Police dog,' said Frisco.

"'What, that mutt!'

"'Maybe not that good, but at least he's a stool pigeon!'"

Corine Wants To Be Empress

CORINE GRIFFITH cherishes three ambitions. To-wit:

(1) A chateau in France.

(2) To play Empress Josephine in an all-color picture.

(3) To win one game of tennis from her husband, Walter Morosco.

As ambitions go, these clunk the lulu mark.

And speaking of Walter (Morosco), 'twas in the late afternoon and his secretary, Mary Goodman, yearned to hit the home trail. Two hours of dee silence surrounded Walter in his office. No telephoning. No letters. No nuthin'. Mary, wondering, knocked on the door.

"Come in."

There stood Walter before his desk, a toy pistol in his hand. A target dangled from the hatrack. A target peppered with holes registered by the rubber bullet in the pistol.

"I'm practicing to be a good host," Walter informed Mary.

MAWSON SCANS POLAR ROCKS

Sir Douglas Mawson, famous Polar explorer, today continues his summary of the work his expedition has accomplished toward solving the mystery of the frozen regions surrounding the South Pole. In his first summary article he pointed out the physical characteristics of the portion of the Antarctic coast between 44 and 66 degrees east longitude and described the topography of the definitely established land between the coast and the South Pole proper.

By SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON.

Commander of the British, Australian and New Zealand Antarctic Research Expedition.

Radio Via London.

S. DISCOVERY, Antarctica, Feb. 4.—(Delayed.)—The occurrence has been established of continental type rocks throughout the land sector of Antarctica between 45 and 90 degrees east longitude.

These rocks for the most part constitute the metamorphic crystalline variety and are complex and obviously of great antiquity.

In addition to these some schists and gneisses and associated plutonic and igneous rocks both granitic and gabbroic are met with. They are less abundant than some other types which though considerably altered are obviously of sedimentary origin such as quartzites and silicated marbles.

A broad and general similarity exists between the rocks of this sector and of the known regions of Queen Mary Land and Adelie Land.

Evidence sufficiently conclusive has been collected demonstrating the continuity of this newly explored area with the vast continental region of the sector located between 90 and 188 degrees east longitude.

This finally disposes of Murrell's reputed claim to have sailed from East to West South of the charted position of Enderby Land.

Definite and extensive recession of the ice sheets in geologically recent and past times has been ascertained.

This is evidenced by the glacially eroded flanks of the present nunataks by the occurrence of erratics from the mainland of the very summit of the off-lying islands, even at an elevation of almost 1,000 feet above sea level.

By soundings and dredgings the occurrence was ascertained of extensive planated areas of the adjacent sea floor, also elsewhere, of vast accumulation of morainic matter as on the offshore banks.

CONVICT'S CASH DISTRIBUTED

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The assets of the former business of Charles T. Davis, convict in Clinton Prison, Dannemora, N. Y., totaling $2,496,020, were ordered distributed by Supreme Court Justice Mitchell.

The order was expected to close a bitter legal contest between Davis and his wife, Mrs. Henrietta R. Davis, who attempted to gain permission to sell the firm of Davis & Geck, surgical instrument manufacturers, of which Davis was the head.

Davis was sentenced to serve from 10 to 20 years in prison following conviction of manslaughter for the slaying of a detective who questioned him in his office concerning a new automobile he had just bought.

Under the court order, a total of $770,000 is to go to Mrs. Davis, and the balance is to remain in stock of the American Cyanamid Corporation, a new company, to go to the Charles T. Davis trust fund.

Deny Veteran, 29, License to Wed Widow, 65

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—On the advice of officials of the United States Veterans' bureau a marriage license was denied here to Francis N. Jensen, 29, disabled World War soldier, and Mrs. Victoria Vicroy, 65, of Leavenworth, Kansas.

Jensen, a paralytic, was removed to the Veterans Hospital. The woman who had registered herself with Veterans' Bureau officials as Jensen's aunt, returned to Leavenworth.

Mrs. Vicroy accompanied by the disabled man applied for the license and did all the talking. She told the clerk she expected the $100 a month compensation Jensen receives from the government would support them.

Jensen had been boarding at the elderly woman's home for the last two years. Veterans' Bureau officials said he would not be permitted to return to Leavenworth. His parents live at Berthoud, Colo.

LABOR PROTEST SENT GOVERNOR

BALTIMORE, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A protest against government contractors employing out of the state labor at low wages for the construction of officers' quarters at Camp George G. Meade was carried to Gov. Ritchie by Henry F. Broening, president of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, and representatives of each trade union.

Gov. Ritchie told the delegation he would forward a letter of protest to Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley.

Mr. Broening said a contract for $400,000 had been let to a North Carolina firm for the building and that the contractors were going to import laborers from that state who will work for wages lower than those prevailing in Maryland.

Girl to Get Even With Officer by Marrying Him

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—"I'll get even with you," said Miss Florence E. Steiger to Policeman George Bein when he gave her a ticket for overtime parking. "I'll get even, if it takes the rest of my life."

That happened last June.

There is little more to add, save to mention that Bein, who is 30, and Miss Steiger, who is 26, have announced their forthcoming marriage.

Overheated Stove Blamed for Fire

Fire said to have been caused by an overheated stove did $200 damage at the home of Anthony Jankofski, at 2701 Shelly street, early today. A pedestrian who noticed smoke issuing from the first floor of the house, a two-story frame, sounded an alarm.

PLAYGROUNDS VALUES GIVEN

Property valuations of playground sites have increased from $1,994,280 in 1925 to $3,187,390 in 1929 with an increase in appropriations for operations of from $125,071 to $239,564, according to Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

The number of playgrounds has increased from 24, in 1925 to 52 in 1929; athletic fields from 17 to 35; swimming pools from 7 to 11; and the number of employes from 144 to 238.

Annual attendance at all recreation centers increased from 2,434,642 to 3,807,303.

Sickly Run Down People Now Getting Precious Vitamins Every Day
They Are Sure They Are Getting Them The Sensible Way
Every person needs Vitamin A and D—from them comes the vitalizing substance you are supposed to get from the various foods you eat.
Half sick, run down, anemic men, women and children need them and need them badly.
If you could depend on getting these precious health promoting Vitamins in the daily food you eat—you would not have to go further.
But it is seldom done. You would have to eat a variety of foods that are Vitamin tested and that is next to impossible. An able chemist after years of experiment has taken Vitamin A and D from pure Norwegian Vitamin tested cod liver oil and put them in small sugar coated tablets—as easy to take as candy.
In two of these energy creating tablets you get the equal of one full teaspoon of pure Cod Liver Oil—almost a miracle.
You avoid the fishy taste and the repulsive smell—but you do get the Vitamins—you are sure you are getting them.
Your doctor when he tells you to take cod liver oil will tell you that he is prescribing it for the Vitamins it contains—he will tell you that the greasy oil has no value.
Now when we say to ailing people whose health is below par that they are sure of getting these Vitamins in McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets we are simply stating a proven truth.
And when we say to your physician that for every ailment, malady or rundown condition for which he prescribes cod liver oil that McCoy's are equally as good we are making a statement of fact—if it were not true we could not publicly publish it.
So all people who are striving for robust health, for greater energy, for keen mind and more power of endurance can now get all the precious Vitamins A and D they need by taking McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets as directed.
Take your Vitamins straight.
And remember also that these tablets, rich in Vitamins, work wonders with puny, frail, underweight children whose bones and teeth are not developing properly and especially is this true when there are any signs of rickets.
Ask any druggist in America for McCoy's—precious but inexpensive—take them with every assurance that they are equally as potent in Vitamins as liquid cod liver oil. 60 tablets 60 cents. ©1929 McC. L. Inc.

CHICKIE

Chickie had the twins by either hand. Little George had eaten a cookie and the crumbs were smeared all over his mouth. Mary wiped his face and turned the baby on its side. She gave Chickie a knowing glance, her lip curling a little: "This comes of falling in love!"

Chickie flushed. "You mean having all these children?" She added valiantly: "I don't see where love has anything to do with it."

"Oh, you don't!"

"Well, every one that loves doesn't"——

Appreciative

Lucy Is Grateful for Help From Girls

Mary gave her a quick appraisement. "Awfully wise aren't you?"

"What about yourself, Mary?"

They lowered their voices, speaking eagerly, now and then blushing and laughing. They did a great deal of this hushed talking; this mysterious speculation. They wondered bitingly about life, about love, about their own mothers and fathers and about these older Blake girls.

They were always talking about Lucy—poor Lucy!

Lucy was only 28—the oldest of the Blake family—she was married five years and already had four children. They pitied her.

Lucy returned, her arms loaded with bundles; her brown hair flying. As she approached, all the little Adamses began to yell at once. Lucy dropped her bundles, seeming to have a dozen arms, gathering them to her and cooing happily: "Hush, now, mother's little precious; hush now."

She turned to the two girls, giving them a little box of chocolate peppermints, saying with deep gratitude: "You're just angels! I don't know whatever in the world I'd do without you. By'm by, when your turn comes, I'll be around and give you a hand."

They looked at each other, their faces crimson, and then began to titter.

"Did you get that?" Mary whispered after they bade Lucy goodby and were walking down the block. "When our turn comes! Well, none of that for mine! I can thank my sisters for opening my eyes."

"Oh, every one doesn't have a hard time like Lucy does," Chickie interrupted.

"No, that's what Lucy thought five years ago, and I suppose mother didn't think that, too, when she was young. Look what they got!"

Chickie closed her ears. What a grating way Mary had of putting these unpleasant things right in your nose! Chickie preferred to waive aside such solid realities as children with grubby faces. She wanted love to be as she dreamed it, an undefinable sweetness that folded about her, leading her along with music in her ears.

She could never couple love with peeling potatoes; with putting fresh papers on the kitchen shelves; with rushing downtown on dollar day to buy rompers for fat little legs. Lucy Adams might do this and call it love. Martha Blake, Mary's mother, might do it.

Chickie had other fancies. She often saw herself walking on some mountain top, a magnificent, laughing fellow at her side, his arm about her. They would watch the sun set or the moon rise. They would kiss. At this touching moment the picture became immortal: Chickie's thought went no farther.

Now, all her dreams were concentrated on one tall, brown-haired lad of 19. What was he doing today? Was he tremulously searching the streets for a chance meeting with her? Was he remembering, like the scent of flowers, the touch of her lips on his? She forgot Mary and drew a sigh from the very inside of her heart.

"Well," Mary said, gasping, "breathe in the whole earth, why don't you?"

Mary mocked. "Gee! Chickie, I didn't think you'd fall so hard!"

Chickie flounced about. "I'm sure I don't know what you're talking about!"

"Oh, you don't, hey? Well, there he is, standing right on the corner. For pity sakes, Chickie, now don't start in to giggle."

Chickie felt all hot all shaking from head to foot; she didn't dare glance in the direction of Mary's eyes, but she waited, her breath swelling so she felt that it was tearing her in two.

"Is he coming over, Mary?"

"Is who coming over?" Mary bantered. "I thought you didn't know what I was talking about."

Chickie managed to look up. Young Arthur calmly swept off his hat, but gave not the slightest evidence of rushing to her feet.

They passed on. Chickie trembled as though she had walked through flame. She was unbelievably humiliated; afraid of Mary's thoughts. Until presently Mary relieved the tension with an exciting: "Oh, didn't he get red, though? Gee! Chickie, he's crazy about you."

Chickie could have thrown her arms about Mary's neck. She whispered softly, "Do you think so, Mary?"

"Well, do I?"

Chickie drifted back into the music's warm glow of her dream. He cared for her. From the heights of sweet ecstasy, she sighed wistfully.

Old doctor's idea still helping Elderly People conquer constipation

DR. CALDWELL made a startling discovery shortly after he graduated from medical school back in 1875. He found great numbers — especially older men and women—suffering from constipation, who were taking harsh laxatives and purgatives. So he concluded that many things people take for constipation do more harm than good, and physicians of today are of the same opinion.

This thought made Dr. Caldwell conduct a search, and out of it came the prescription which made him famous. Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out-of-sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. Its action was so thorough even in the most obstinate cases, and yet so gentle with women and children.

The product you get from your drug store, today, when you ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is put up exactly in accordance with this prescription. It has become the world's most popular laxative. It is a pleasant tasting mixture of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients; it is a real corrective for constipation for men, women and children.

LOVEJOY

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXVI.

LOVEJOY stood with her back to the kitchen door, facing her. If she goes out of this house like this, she thought in agony, all my peace and happiness go out with her!

She braced herself.

"Hilda," she said, struggling to be calm and cool-headed, "you want a hundred more dollars from me, don't you"—And that's all you want, isn't it? You don't really want to go down to Mr. Nicholson's office and tell him things about me, do you? I've never hurt you, Hilda . . ."

"You open that door!" Hilda interrupted, her light blue eyes fixed on the backdoor key in Lovejoy's shaking hands. "Open it!"

What might have happened Lovejoy never knew, if Aline had not come up the back steps at that moment and knocked on the kitchen door.

"Hello, hello!" her gay pretty voice called. "Open the door!"

With a great gasp of relief Lovejoy turned and unlocked the door for her.

"What's all the fuss about?" she asked, coming into the kitchen.

She stared at Hilda in mock amazement.

"Hilda's not leaving, is she?" she asked. "You're not letting a wonderful girl like Hilda go, are you?—Why, Hilda, if I didn't have such a good maid I'd give you a place in my house this minute! What's wrong anyway?"

It was Hilda who answered.

"She threw me out!" she said violently. "She's scairt of me because I know things about her. She's afraid I'm going to tell Mister about her and what she do. So she threw me out!"

Aline nodded sympathetically. Then she turned to Lovejoy.

"I hear the baby crying," she said to her. "Suppose you run and take care of him. I'll settle all this with Hilda. Hilda and I have always been great friends."

Lovejoy was glad to get out of the kitchen . . . After all, this was Aline's affair and it was distinctly up to her to settle it. If anyone was going to buy those letters from Hilda, it was certainly Aline who ought to dig down into her pocket for the money . . .

Aline Gives Money

They aren't my letters! Lovejoy told herself as she lifted the baby out of his crib and carried him over to the open window to see a bird's nest just outside in the lilac bushes.

They weren't her letters. And yet she was filled with a sense of guilt and terror. She knew why she was, too—because Hilda knew about her and Steve Ogleby!

She stood there with Tom's baby in her arms and remembered how she had let Steve think that she didn't love Tom any more. . . . She remembered how she had gone out into the night twice to meet him just for the excitement of the thing. And she remembered how she had let him hold her close to him and kiss her and tell her that he loved her.

How does a woman do things like that? she asked herself. How did I happen to do things like that?

It seemed to her in that moment of fear and repentance that she would give half of her life to have them undone.

Aline came walking into the room with her finger on her rouged lips. Behind that warning finger she was smiling.

"Sah! I've got it all fixed!" she whispered. "She's promised to turn over the letters and the wire, and I'm going to write her a check for a hundred dollars. Where do you keep your ink and pen?"

Five minutes later Hilda was out of the house, taking with her two great bulging suitcases with her.

"She'll never bother us again," Aline remarked, watching her go down the sunny little street. "After she cashes that check we'll have it for proof that she blackmailed us and she won't ever dare to open her mouth to us again."

Has More Letters

She held up the two letters and the telegram in her hands a second. Then she began to tear them up.

"It was funny that she had those letters here," Lovejoy mused. "Just before you came in she told me that she had them in her trunk at her girl friend's house. Do you suppose she has two more by any chance?"

Aline shook her lovely blond head.

"No," she replied. "She just told you they weren't here so you wouldn't try to take them from her by force. I'm sure these are all she has."

But she was wrong.

Early that afternoon Hilda called up the house.

"I want to tell you I got two more of those letters, Missis," her thick slow voice came over the wire, "I going to get a new job and if you ever tell anybody anything bad about me I going to show Mister those letters sure."

Without another word she hung up at her end of the line, leaving Lovejoy shaken and frightened and half-sick once more.

At half past three Aunt Em arrived to help Lovejoy with the baby and the dinner.

"I'm glad you did get rid of that girl!" she declared in her quick energetic way when she came in. "I happened to come in here one day when you were out chasing around with that Alderson woman, and she was lying on the bed in her room letting the baby yell himself black in the face and never going near him. I never said anything about it because I thought if you wanted to have a sloppy good-for-nothing like that in your house . . ."

Aunt Em was fond of saying that she never poked her nose into other people's business.

The truth was that she was always poking her nose into everybody's business. Finding out about things that did not concern her was the very breath of life to Aunt Em.

Norrie Recommended

"Why did you let her go?" she asked now, taking off the black hat that Lovejoy had picked for her the first day she had gone shopping with Aline. It had been plain and smart when Lovejoy had bought it. But now there was a paste buckle and a small bunch of white violets on it. Aunt Em had her own ideas about style, and they were the ideas of 1890.

"Well, I thought I ought to have someone who knew more about babies," fibbed Lovejoy.

Aunt Em nodded vigorously.

"You need a woman like Norrie Shane—that's what you need!" she said, snapping off her words. "If you're going to run out for three or four hours every day, playing cards and going shopping with that painted-up Alderson woman, you ought to have some responsible person with that precious baby. . . . It would be better for you to do the housework yourself and have someone like Norrie for him!"

She's right, Lovejoy said to herself.

She knew that she could do all of the housework in three or four hours every morning. Then she would be free until it was time to get dinner.

And if I peel all the vegetables and make the salad for dinner in the morning, she went on thinking, I'd be free as air every afternoon until half past five. And if I had a woman like Norrie in the house I'd never have to worry about the baby.

"How much does Norrie get in the way of salary?" she asked slowly.

"You'd better talk to her about salary," Aunt Em answered. "She's out of a job right now—and she's coming here at half past five to see you. I told her as soon as you telephoned me that you'd let Hilda go."

In New House

On the second of June Tom and Lovejoy moved into the new house at the corner of the lane and Tudor road.

They didn't have much to move from the old house. Just their trunks—three of them—and the few little odds-and-ends that they had bought since their marriage.

They took them all up to the new house in the automobile, and Norrie Shane brought the baby in his buggy—Norrie all in the spotless white of her uniform, with her plain good face glowing with happiness.

"It's so nice to be here with my own friends," she said on that first night when the three of them sat down to their first meal in the new house. "If I were working in some big house, among strangers, I'd be having my dinner on a tray up in the baby's room."

She had come to work for the Nicholsons for less money than she was used to getting. But if she regretted it she gave no sign of it. She seemed to be as happy as a lark as she flew around the new bright rooms, helping Lovejoy, that night.

"She's crazy about you. That's why she took this place, and that's why she likes it here," Lovejoy told Tom bluntly when they were in their own room, getting ready for bed.

"If I were in her shoes I'd want to stay away from you as much as possible," she went on, slipping into her blue silk nightgown. "But I don't believe she realizes, herself, that she's gone hay-wire about you, Tom. Norrie wouldn't . . . She's the kind of woman who thinks it would be a deadly sin to fall in love with her best friend's husband. But she's done it all the samey—Every time she meets your eye she looks like a dying duck in a thunderstorm! Noticed it?"

WELL behaved children win the hearts of all who see them.

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

The International Engagements Are Untangled

OLINA'S shriek, for it was hers, hardly had come to our ears before Dicky and Harry were at the staircase in the hall, running up it, while Lillian and I raced at their heels. Indeed they had started for the door before the scream. Mr. Underwood issuing a swift direction to "keep those swine covered," to one of his men who had mounted guard with a revolver over the prisoners.

Then, at the very entrance to the apartment we were balked by one of those hitches which often come to the most carefully laid plans. The guard in the hall evidently had mistaken his instructions. At any rate he was not at his post, and the door to the apartment was locked, as of course it should have been, for the guard had a key. But no one of us had one.

"We mustn't knock," Harry said. "One of them might leave and come over here. Give a shoulder, Dicky."

The two men threw themselves against the door, once, twice, thrice. Then the casement and lock gave and we stumbled into the apartment. Philip Veritzen was tumbled into a corner, apparently unable to get up, but his eyes were blazing.

"Get him," he croaked. "I can't move."

Mary and Olina were standing close together, beautiful statues of terror, their eyes fixed on the balcony outside, up and down which struggling figures were outlined. Dicky and Harry plunged for the opening while Philip Veritzen called out a warning.

"Look out for him! He has a murderous knife."

There could be but one outcome, however, no matter how resourceful or skillful the man outside. Lillian and I were sure of that when our husbands rushed through the doorway, and though the ensuing seconds seemed a lifetime, our belief was justified when they came back, dragging a beardless man of just below medium height, slender but wiry and powerful as the puma he resembled, as he swung in Harry Underwood's powerful grasp, his lips curled back over his teeth.

Irrelevantly I forgot everything else at the sight of his mouth.

"That's the way I knew him," I cried. "See that peculiar tooth at the side of his mouth? The old woman in the bungalow didn't have that. I knew there was something when I talked to this man the other day. I'm afraid he has killed that old woman."

"I'm afraid he's pretty nearly done for someone else," Harry Underwood said grimly, as with Dicky's aid he trussed the man securely and deposited him in a corner. "Wait! Noel! We'll give you a hand! Don't try to carry him alone. We couldn't move till we had this hell-hound secure."

They went to the door as Noel staggered through it with Prince Georges held against him. The prince was so near unconsciousness that his feet dragged along the floor, and even as Dicky and Harry reached him, he slumped against them in a faint. He was bleeding profusely from a cut somewhere on his body—perilously near his heart—it seemed to my eyes, and I saw the men look at him concernedly as they laid him flat on the floor and bent over him.

"The blasted fool!" I heard Harry Underwood mutter. "He must have taken off that mail shirt because the rest of us didn't have them. Get a doctor quick, Lil, and Madge, bring me some shears to rip these clothes."

We rushed at our errands, but before we had accomplished them we heard Olina's voice again in a scream of terror as she raced to the side of the unconscious man, and dropped on her knees.

"Georges! speak to me! Oh my love! I've been so blind. I did not know! Georges! Georges!"

Mary went swiftly up to her and put her arm around the babbling girl.

"I know, Olina, I know," she said. "Come, dear. You must let them take care of him."

Olina looked up at her frenziedly. I knew that she had no idea of what she was saying. All her life was focused on the man before her.

"Don't you dare to touch him!" she said. "He is mine, do you hear, not yours."

Even in the stress of that moment I could not help throwing a glance at Philip Veritzen, whatever the blow that had thrust him helpless into the corner, the shock of this revelation was galvanizing his muscles into action. He raised himself painfully, and limped toward the princess, his eyes blazing with anger.

"Noel!" he called. "Noel! Your betrothed is beside herself. She does not know what she is saying. Why are you not attending to her? She thinks you are hurt and is confusing you with the prince."

But Noel had heard another call, soft low-toned, but even as imperative as that of his father.

"Noel! Come here," Mary had said, and the young violinist himself painfully injured, came to her side.

"Olina! Look!" Mary said softly, taking her arms from Olina's waist and putting them around Noel's neck regardless of the eyes upon her. "Does this look as if I wanted Georges?"

With a glad little cry Noel caught her tightly to him and kissed her passionately. Then she pulled herself away and stooped to Olina again. Olina who was staring at her dazedly.

"It's all right, dear," she said reassuringly. "You and Georges love each other just as Noel and I do. We just have been playing at cross purposes, that's all. And when Georges is better we'll all laugh together over it. But you must come away with me now. You're hurting Georges, hindering his being cared for by staying here."

Olina looked at her wildly for a second, then as if unhearing she turned away and laid her lips to Georges' forehead. I had seen the young prince's eyelids twitching, and other signs of returning consciousness, as I knew had Dickey and Harry, so we did not compel her removal as we otherwise would have done.

"Olina" he whispered.

"Yes, Georges." The answering murmur was so low that we could hardly hear it, but the wounded man's eyes brightened at the response.

"You're safe—not hurt?—I tried—"

"You saved my life!" The words were a peal of triumphant happiness of which his face was a reflection. Then remembrance came to him, his eyes shadowed and he looked around with a curious, almost shamefaced expression.

"Where is—" he said and stopped. Harry, kneeling on the other side of the young prince and working over him, spoke abruptly.

"Mary! Settle this quickly and get her away," and Mary, catching Noel's hand, drew his arm around her and went over to the wounded man.

"Don't worry about me, Georges," she said with her usual nonchalance. "Olina will keep you jumping the rope as I'm going to keep Noel. Now kiss her quickly, for these amateur surgeons and nurses around here are yearning to show how much First Aid they know before the doctor gets here, and she must come with us."

For a fleeting second there was an expression in the young prince's eyes which was oddly questioning. Noel's arms were holding Mary with the unmistakable protective clasp of an ardent lover. Her lovely piquant face, glowing with the thrill of acknowledging the love which she had kept hidden for so long, was one to accelerate the pulses of any man, and Georges had loved her. That her stratagems had succeeded in making the young prince desire a release from the betrothal to her which he was too chivalrous to ask, I was as sure as I was that his heart had returned to its old allegiance to Olina. But I was also sure that the picture of Mary's lovely mutinous face would never quite fade from his mental vision.

There was another equally beautiful face, however, much nearer his, one which held passionate tenderness instead of mirthful friendliness. His eyes came back to it and kindled into ardor from the fire in hers.

"Olina, cherie!" he murmured, and gave his lips to hers in a tender, clinging kiss. Then the young princess raised her head proudly, unabashed, and gave herself up to Mary's tender arms.

"Take her into your room, Mary," I directed hurriedly, and with Lillian stood so that no backward glance of Olina's should show what we had seen—that Prince Georges had fainted again.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

What's the Matter With Love?

EVERY now and then some bright little theorist gets up and announces that LOVE is a relic of barbarism or mid-Victorian fetish or a dead issue as much out of the picture as pompadours and petticoats.

Yet, love songs and love stories and love magazines continue to be the best sellers. And people continue to marry and live and die—for love—if you believe the newspapers.

The truth is that love is suffering from too much COMPETITION.

Love always had a lot of competition in a man's life. There was always his ambition, his work, his diversions and his adventures to fight before love could wedge its way into a man's consciousness.

But in a woman's life love was the only really vital thing. Love and marriage. That's all there was—there wasn't any more. Girls who didn't marry just "hadn't lived." They were helpless, aimless, meaningless driftwood on the tide.

Today if you told an intelligent young woman that she had nothing to live for except love, she would hand you a very merry ha-ha.

Not that she doesn't want and intend to HAVE love. Every normal girl does! But she wants such a lot of other things that love often gets lost in the shuffle.

She wants a career or a profession or a job. She wants to fly an airplane and drive a car and make a swimming record. She wants to travel or to write scenarios or to study interior decorating or to try her luck in Hollywood. She wants adventure and self-expression and experience. She wants to try her wings and fly high before settling down in a dove-cote.

Sometimes marriage and a home are the last and the least things she thinks she wants. Love has to put up a pretty stiff fight to win out against so many rivals and to conquer her spirit of high adventure. He wouldn't dream of wasting an arrow on her. What he needs is a machine gun!

Still, in the end, love usually has his way with her. And, all of a sudden, she wakes up some morning to discover that a blue-and-white kitchenette, and a cozy living-room with a fireplace and cretonne curtains and somebody on the other side of the lamp have completely crowded that airplane—and all the other things—out of her mind and imagination.

NOT SO DUMB

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Davies' forthcoming All-Talking Picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play, "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Dulcy is an adorable blonde, always helping people—but usually into trouble. A serious quarrel with Gordon, her fiance, results from her determination to help him put over a business deal. Over his protests she goes to the train with him to meet Forbes, a financier, and invites him and his family to her house for a week-end. Gordon finds, to his horror, that she has a new butler who is an ex-convict, and that she has also invited an utter stranger named Van Dyke, and a scenario writer, Vincent Leach, who was in love with Angela. Gordon blew up and walked out, leaving Dulcy weeping.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

DULCY had no idea how long she had been sitting there crying. It seemed to her years since her whole world had come crashing down around her. She had done everything she could to help Gordon put over his business deal, and now he had run away from her.

Her whole body shook with sobs, and a tear was trickling down her nose when a pair of arms was flung around her from behind.

"Gordon!" She wheeled about with a happy cry, and buried her head on his shoulder. "You've come back! I thought I'd never see you again."

"Don't you know, dear," he told her huskily, "That if it weren't for you I couldn't live? I couldn't work as I do. You're really helping me all the time just by being yourself. That's all you have to do to help me—just be yourself."

"Oh Gordon, darling, I know I've done some silly things, but when I marry you I'll promise to stand by you and love you and help you. That's why I'm doing it now."

Gordon realized, suddenly, that if he didn't win this point now he never would. And life would be just a series of muddles, the right people in the wrong places and the wrong people always with Dulcy.

"Don't you see, darling, that everything depends on my getting along with Forbes?" he asked her. "If I'm not in on this merger of his, I'll be wiped out. And I'm afair he won't like being down here with such a funny crowd."

The argument might just as well never have been started, for all the impression it made on Dulcy.

"But Forbes is being unfair," she insisted. "He'd never see it if you just went to him in his office and said so. Offering you a sixteen and two-thirds per cent is silly. It's such a funny number. But if he finds himself down here, having a lovely time with a lot of interesting people, he'll see in just the right frame of mind to listen to reason."

Bill Gets Angry

"Reason!" echoed Gordon, wildly. He was on the verge of losing his, he decided. And matters were not improved when Bill wandered in with the observation that he had decided that Dulcy must have adopted a family of half-wits.

"Shut up, Willie," Dulcy commanded.

"Don't call me Willie!" raged Bill. "I've implored you to stop it, and now I warn you that if you keep on, something will happen that you'll be sorry for."

Perkins appeared just then, his manner more gruff than usual, his abrupt gait seeming to have even more than its customary suggestion of the chain step, as he ushered Mr. and Mrs. Forbes and Angela into the room. Mr. Forbes seemed to take a strange interest in him, much more interest, in fact, than he took in Dulcy's remarks about her delight in seeing him, the good rest he was going to have, the weather, and all the other stand-bys of conversation that made her conversation so distracting to those who weren't used to it.

Mr. Forbes moved with an air of pompous dignity, and his thoughts seemed to be far from what she was saying. In fact, he wore a puzzled air, as though he wondered just why he was there and how he could get away.

He clutched at Gordon as he might have grabbed a life preserver in a stormy sea, and moved away from the spot where his wife and daughter were exchanging compliments with Dulcy.

"Of course, Gordon," he said, pompously, "we could have settled our affairs in two minutes at my office, but as long as we're both here we might as well—"

Dulcy Intrudes

Gordon drew a long sigh of relief. So Forbes wasn't the sort who forgot business as soon as he left his office. Maybe they could get the details of their deal all arranged before Dulcy's other guests appeared. Gordon had a sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach whenever he thought of them.

"Now, if we look at it this way—"

Forbes was just beginning to get under way when Dulcy interupted:

"Did you come the long way or the short one?"

Forbes didn't know, nor did he care, obviously. Bristling with vexation, he asked his wife, who didn't know either. Whereupon Dulcy laughingly admitted that she didn't know herself which route was shorter, but she thought they were both awfully pretty, anyway.

Gordon turned cold with fear. If only Dulcy would keep still and go away! The thin, hard lines around Forbes' mouth were deepening, and he all but snarled when Dulcy introduced Schuyler Van Dyke to Mrs. Forbes, with the remark that she just knew they would love each other. They seemed, indeed, to cling to each others' hands far longer than was necessary, and their smiles were sickeningly sweet.

The air cleared somewhat, however, when Forbes and Van Dyke were introduced.

"C. Roger Forbes?" Van Dyke asked with a show of respect.

Nothing could have made Forbes happier than such a tribute to his fame in the business world.

Forbes Is Satisfied

"And you—you aren't, by any chance, Schuyler Van Dyke?" he asked, and learned that his surmise was correct. He took a deep breath and seemed to expand with self-importance. After all, perhaps it wasn't a mistake to waste a week end, when it brought him in contact with such men as Schuyler Van Dyke.

"It is a real pleasure to meet you at last," he said cordially. "I believe that I just missed you at the Metals Conference last week."

Gordon noted that the sound of Dulcy's voice chattering away to Mrs. Forbes and Angela seemed to annoy the financier less and less, as he and Van Dyke disposed of Wall street in a sentence, finished interstate commerce in one forceful gesture, and moved on to world affairs with the air of men who, if not on the inside, at least have a ringside seat. Forbes grew confidential and spoke more intently, as if some sixth sense told him that Dulcy was moving closer to them, about to interrupt.

"I believe I know something of your interests, Van Dyke," he said earnestly, undisturbed by that individual's vague detachment.

"Ah, yes," Van Dyke replied, a little wearily. "They're rather wide, you know. I'm even interested in jewelry to some extent."

Forbes' eyes widened with amazement, and Gordon could hardly believe his ears. The strain of the last few hours had been so great that he felt as though he had been living under shell fire. So muddled were his thoughts that he didn't know whether to greet Van Dyke as an ally or reckon on him as a heavily-armed opponent.

Dulcy, as usual, knew just what she thought and was pleased with the outcome. A little behind Forbes, she signaled Gordon, wiggling her fingers in delight and nodding her head as she whispered quite audibly, "You see?"

The interchange of glances was not lost on Forbes. He was not a man to allow anything to be put over on him.

"What's that?" he demanded, and even Dulcy might have been hard put to it to explain, but luckily she was saved the necessity by the arrival of Perkins. Perkins, looking just a little more like a thug, and less like a butler, than usual.

"Dese bags?" he called in a resounding voice, that woke the echoes. "What rom'll I put dem in?"

Dulcy Gives Orders

Reminded of her duties as a hostess, Dulcy was once more in her element.

"In the shell-pink suite, Perkins," she told him sweetly.

She turned to Mrs. Forbes, beaming, delightedly.

"I am putting you in the shell-pink suite, and the minute you see it, you will think you're in a bridal chamber. Isn't that too romantic? You and Mr. Forbes in the bridal suite."

Dulcy's voice, always musical, rose to cooing, lyric heights when her thoughts dwelt on sentiment.

"This isn't just my little shack that I call home," she went on, while Forbes glowered. "Not this week. It's just a little love-nest. We are all going to be so happy, far away from everyone but the ones we love—"

No one would have suspected from the expression on Forbes' face that he loved anyone at that moment, least of all Dulcy.

"There's you and Mrs. Forbes," Dulcy counted methodically on her fluttering fingers, which Gordon loved even when he longed, as he did now, to use them as a gag on her rosebud mouth.

"You're going to be just like a couple on their honeymoon," she went on determinedly, ignoring Gordon's frantic attempts to signal her to silence.

"And Gordie and I are the engaged couple, and Angela—"

Gordon trembled with horror, wondering what she would say next. Desperately he tried to think of something to say that would distract Forbes' attention, but Mrs. Forbes saved him the trouble. Moving toward the disappearing Perkins, she reminded Dulcy of her duties as a hostess.

"Shall we leave the men to talk business?" Dulcy asked. "Wouldn't you like to go to your room?"

Sighing with relief, Gordon turned to Forbes, saying "About our little deal, Mr. Forbes—" But his mind was on Dulcy. If only she wouldn't say anything to Mrs. Forbes or Angela that would get him into hot water!

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Inconsistent Hospitality

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

I belong to a girls' club and we are going to give a formal dance, charging so much per couple, and all the girls are given a certain amount of bids (tickets) to dispose of. It is, of course, a couple affair, and I will have to ask some young man to escort me. What I would like to know is this: Is it my place to purchase the bid and invite the young man to escort me, or shall I offer a "bid" for sale to him? It seems rather awkward to ask him to buy the ticket and invite me to go with him, doesn't it? If I am to pay for the ticket, shall I offer it to him for safekeeping or am I to hand it in at the entrance?

PERPLEXED.

I AGREE with you that it seems inconsistent and inappropriate for you to extend the invitation and not fulfill all the details of the hospitality. Buy the tickets yourself, and send them to the young man "for safekeeping," as you perfectly say, or give them to him as you start to the dance. You might say, "Will you keep the tickets for me, please, Bob?" as you give them to him.

GRATEFUL FOR RESTORED HEALTH

Mr. Frank Sipola of Palmerton, Pa., a newcomer to America from the shores of Sunny Italy, had a hard fight to retain his health here in this country under new conditions of living. He caught cold while working in the mines. For a long time it grew worse and worse until it looked like he was running into consumption. A friend found a remedy which promptly relieved him.

He writes in a very grateful—"I was in despair with cough. I lost one of the slate mines work because I could not get my breath when the weather changed or the air was heavy. The doctors I had did not seem to help me. I was no matter what I took or what I would swell up, get a fever, take different kinds of patent medicines to get rid of it, but it was only a waste of time and money. A friend of mine, a fellow Italian, kindly told me how Wonola Tonic was made, from herbs and plants brought from different parts of the world. I realized that this new remedy could help an Italian like myself, as well as Americans in a way no ordinary medicine had done.

"After using three bottles of World's Tonic the suffering discharges in my nose healed. I no longer swallowed tube to stomach, the poisonous catarrhal droppings. My appetite got better, my blood cleared up. Spaghetti tasted good again, like it used to taste back in Italy. I am a well man now and I owe my health to World's Tonic. Of course, I am grateful to the scientific men who have given this famous remedy to humanity. And I am glad to be one of the many to write down my experience and make a record of my case."

World's Tonic is on sale at Dow's, McKinney's, Liggett Main, Marlowe and other modern drug stores. (A 66)

STAGE SET FOR SPORT FETE

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

POWER FOR GOOD LOST TO FOOTBALL

FOOTBALL in this section has lost one of its best-known and most popular figures in the death of Alex W. Stevenson, University of Pittsburgh scout and assistant coach. The announcement yesterday that he had succumbed to an attack of pneumonia after an illness of only three days caused deep regret not only among his wide circle of friends throughout the Pittsburgh district but also among gridiron men in all other parts of the country with whom his scouting activities for the Panthers had frequently brought him into contact.

Alex W. Stevenson

It was with a feeling of personal loss that every one in a host of acquaintances here and elsewhere learned of Mr. Stevenson's death. To know him was to admire him for his many fine traits. With his football ability he combined a rare personality and high ideals of clean sportsmanship that won for him the warm friendship and lofty respect of all with whom he had any dealings, and those who were in a sense his competitors in the field of football were by no means the least among his admirers.

THOUGH as president of the St. Clair Country Club and a member of the board of governors of the Keystone Athletic Club, Mr. Stevenson was prominent in golf and other sports, it was in football that he was most widely known. He starred as a player for West Virginia University, and served as assistant coach and chief scout at Pitt through the long period of 21 seasons.

During that time, he worked under four Panther coaches—Joe Thompson in 1909-10-11-12, Joe Duff in 1913-14, Pop Warner from 1915 to 1923, inclusive, and Jock Sutherland from 1924 until the end of last season. A brother, Dr. James W. Stevenson, of McKeesport, played on the Pitt teams of 1908-09-10-11. Alex won a particularly high ranking as a scout, always bringing back most minute details of a prospective foe's style of play, and his splendid work in that capacity played no small part in Pitt's gridiron successes. Through it all he was an everlasting credit to the sport, continually striving for its uplift and advancement, and not only Pitt, but football in general, will mourn his death all the more as the passing of a power for the good.

RECOGNIZING not only his ranking as the oldest club president in the major baseball leagues in point of continuous years in office, but also the many big things that he has done for the game, the National League has paid to President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburgh club, the highest honor and tribute ever bestowed upon any team owner.

The reports sent out from the league meeting in New York on Tuesday that the local magnate had been "re-elected vice president of the league" fell short of making known the full extent of the tribute. It develops that President Dreyfuss was re-elected for life.

Barney Dreyfuss

NEVER in the history of the majors has any other magnate been so signally honored. It was as a mark of respect to President Dreyfuss that the office of vice president of the league was created and voted to him a year ago, and now, in extending the period of the honor to the full time of his life, the Pirate chief's fellow club owners have shown an even higher recognition and appreciation of what he has done for baseball during his record-breaking terms of 31 consecutive years as a club president—in 1899 at Louisville and from 1900 to date in Pittsburgh. It isn't only in his home city that President Dreyfuss is recognized as the leading magnate of his time.

EVIDENTLY the promoters of the forthcoming bout between Jack Sharkey and Awful Phil Scott in Miami have sensed that the match lacks the attractiveness required to fill the arena at top prices, for they have decided to throw the major portion of the seats on sale at the bottom cost.

A total of 29,600 tickets out of 50,200 will be offered at the lowest price, $5.49, with a middle price of $12.50 and a top figure of $25. The exact location of the $5.49 seats is not announced. Probably they are somewhere in Georgia.

ARE you all set to attend the big second annual sports dinner to be given by Pittsburgh Chapter, Baseball Writers' Association of America, in Pirate Hall, William Penn Hotel, tonight? If you're not there you'll miss the greatest sports show ever held here.

Many of the country's outstanding notables will be on hand. There'll be a fine feed, music, speeches, merriment, and no end of additional features. Grab a ticket. Gates open at 6 o'clock.

Eddie Baker

NOT often, if ever, have you heard of a college athlete's appearing as a varsity performer on both American sea coasts in two different branches of major sports within a period of less than five weeks. To Eddie Baker, versatile Pitt star, goes the distinction of having achieved that rare transcontinental feat. On January 1, Baker played quarterback for the Panther football team against Southern California in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, and last Monday, February 3, he played guard for the Pitt basketball team against Fordham in New York. Participating in different varsity sports on the shores of the Pacific and Atlantic at points where the oceans are more than 3,100 miles apart, and inside a span of only 34 days, is crowding quite an unusual lot of traveling and sport shifting into little more than a month.

THE big baseball leagues came through with a pair of player trades or shifts after all, just when signs pointed to a stand-pat policy that would send the teams to the starting line in April exactly as they were made up at the beginning of February.

In a last desperate effort to bolster its forces, the Cincinnati club first traded Pitcher Adolfo Luque to Brooklyn for Pitcher Douglas McWeeny, and then obtained Infielder Leo Durocher from the New York Yankees for a cash consideration and a player to be named later, who will then be passed along by the Yanks to pay an obligation to a Pacific Coast League club.

DAN HOWLEY evidently is planning to make a National League fight with American League weapons. Durocher is the third American Leaguer to be purchased by the Reds, Harry Heilmann and Bob Meusel having preceded him.

Howley has been more active in the player market than any other manager in the big show since he shifted from the Browns to the

LUQUE SENT TO BROOKLYN IN TRADE

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Cincinnati Reds of the National League yesterday drew on clubs of Greater New York for two players, surrendered one, and promised to deliver another later. The transfer of Leo Durocher, flashy fielding shortstop, but light hitter, was effected by the Yankees to the Reds for an unannounced sum of money and an unidentified player. The Cincinnati player, however, is not expected to join the Yankees, but will be used to pay an obligation the club owes in the Pacific Coast League.

Cincinnati gave Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban pitcher to Brooklyn in an even trade for Douglas McWeeny, a big pitcher with a world of stuff, but weak last year in control.

Alert observers along the baseball Rialto were surprised that Durocher could be waived out of the American League. The Springfield, Mass., boy hit only .246 for New York last season, but he was regarded as the best fielding shortstop in the business. He has played with the Yankees two seasons, but has been the property of the club for four years, spending one year at Atlanta and another at St. Paul on option.

KNOWN AS "JOCKEY"

He is only 24 years old, but one of baseball's most gifted conversationalists and famed from one end of the diamond to the other as a jockey, who makes himself objectionable to opposing players by riding them.

If Durocher becomes a regular for the Reds the far famed double play combination of Foru and Critz will be broken up. The Cincinnati shortstop and second baseman in 1928 assisted the Reds in making a record of 194 double plays. Critz is regarded by many experts as the best fielding second baseman in baseball.

LUQUE'S AVERAGE LOW

Luque last season participated in 32 games, winning five and losing 16. His average earned runs allowed per nine inning game was 4.50, McWeeny took part in 36 games, winning four and losing 10. His average of earned runs per game was 6.10.

Dan Howley, manager of the Reds, has moved to the National from the American league and the addition of Durocher marks the third American League player to go with him. The others, Bob Meusel of the Yankees and Harry Heilmann, of Detroit, are expected to strengthen the Reds' outfield.

The New York Giants announced that Lou Allen, Harvey Ballew and Eddie Marshall, young infielders, and Sam Leslie, who is to be converted from a first baseman into an outfielder, will go to the San Antonio training camp with the pitchers and catchers who are to report February 17.

MANY NOTABLES ARRIVE FOR BIG AFFAIR

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Pittsburgh and the sports writers of the city today are hosts to celebrities representing many recreations, the visitors and native sons to be guests tonight at the second annual dinner of the local chapter, Baseball Writers' Association of America. The big frolic will be staged in Pirate Hall of the William Penn Hotel.

The affair promises to be one of the greatest indoor sport events ever held in Pittsburgh. John L. Hernon, chairman of the writers' general committee, this morning moved headquarters into Room 366 of the William Penn, where late guests will be provided with tickets.

Perhaps the earliest arrival was the colorful Lewis (Hack) Wilson, who reached Pittsburgh about 7 o'clock from his Martinsburg, W. Va., home. Hack seemed to be in such condition as to scare off even a boy of Art Shires nerve.

Fresh from New York, where he signed a new Cub contract of such princely figures as to make him one of the highest-paid players in the sport, Hack naturally was in a good humor. The star outfielder of the National League championship outfit will greet many of his friends, he being well acquainted in the Pittsburgh district. With Wilson was Mrs. Wilson and their little son, Bobby.

HACK TO SPEAK

Toastmaster Joseph N. Mackrell, who, himself, is an admirer of the sturdy little home-run clouter of Joe McCarthy's bold brigade, expects to call on the Martinsburg boy for a few remarks.

A few hours after Wilson's arrival, Judge K. M. Landis hove into sight. The white-haired jurist and commissioner of baseball, is a striking figure and his appearance here today is sure to appeal to local sports followers.

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, came in close on the heels of Landis. Both will be conspicuous at the speaker's table tonight.

A surprise arrival for the big festival was the popular Charles (Buck) Herzog, former star infielder of the National League, who now is an official of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

RING SOLONS HERE

Boxing was much in the foreground with the arrival here of two members of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission. They are Frank Wiener, chairman, of Philadelphia, and Henry Farrell, of Wilkes-Barre. Commissioner Havey J. Boyle, of Pittsburgh, greeted his brother commissioners.

Chick Meehan, famous coach of the New York University team, was another guest of the city and sports writers. Chick will be entertained during the day by local members of N. Y. U., alumni and other friends.

Burleigh Grimes and his Minerva party were due in town in time for the feast.

At 1 o'clock Landis and Heydler and the boxing commissioners were honor guests at a luncheon in the Duquesne Club, Judge F. P. Patterson and A. W. McMillan being the hosts.

JOCK NOT PRESENT

Dr. Jock Sutherland, head football coach of the University of Pittsburgh, today expressed regret that he will be unable to be a guest at tonight's fete. He is to be the principal speaker at a mammoth sports banquet to be held at Weston, W. Va., tonight and was unable to break the engagement because he himself set the date after he had informed the Weston committee he would be unable to attend at an earlier time. The arrangements were completed well in advance of the setting of the date for tonight's affair. Jock was a guest of honor of the sports scribes last year, and pronounced their banquet one of the best he ever had attened.

PIRATE ICEMEN IDLE REST OF WEEK

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Pittsburgh's Ice Pirates will have no part in National Hockey League warfare for the remainder of this week. The Bucs originally were scheduled to meet the Boston Bruins here on Saturday, but the game has been transferred to Fort Erie, Ont., and the date has been changed to next Wednesday.

Manager Frank Frederickson is to put his stalwarts through two stiff workouts today, in preparation for their game with the Cougars in Detroit next Sunday. The first drill was held on Duquesne Garden ice, and the second will be held at the sports writers' banquet at the William Penn Hotel tonight.

Figures on the individual scoring feats of the Bucs show Jerry Lowrey to be in the lead with a total of 23 points, representing 12 goals and 11 assists. Hib Milks is second by a margin of two points, and Harold Darragh and Bud Jarvis remain very much in the running. The individual scoring records are as follows:

Lowrey	12	11	23
Milks	12	9	21
Darragh	12	9	21
Jarvis	12	7	19
McGibbon	10	6	16
Frederickson	4	1	5
White	6	1	7
Fraser	6	1	7
Sanders	6	1	7
Barton	6	1	7
Smith	6	1	7

(Bert McCaffrey, scored three goals and four assists as Pirate before being traded to Les Canadiens for Fraser on December 26. Archie Briden scored four goals and three assists before being sold to London, Ont., on January 28. Frederickson out with injuries since December 10.)

FIGHT RESULTS

At Oakland, Cal.—Wesley Ketchel knocked out Pete Meyers, 2 rounds. Milling Mitchell defeated Kermit Thompson, 6 rounds.

At San Francisco—Battling Doeler and Mario Mario drew, 10 rounds.

At Springfield, Ill.—Chuck Wiggins defeated Frankie Winn, 10 rounds.

Pirates Retain Dr. Marks as Physician

Dr. W. L. Marks, team physician at Carnegie Tech, and for the past two years club physician of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has been signed by the Bucs for the coming season and will accompany the Bucs to Paso Robles February 18.

With the signing of Dr. Marks, the Pirates are now in possession of two physicians. Dr. Charles A. Jorgensen, the new trainer, also being an M.D. He will look after the ailments of the Pirates via the chiropractic methods.

Unless it be a case of too many cooks spoiling the broth, the Pirates should suffer little from illness and injury this year.

'A's Vanguard Off For First Training

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Several members of the champion Athletics, left here last night for Hot Springs, Ark., where they will take a course of 21 baths and indulge in light training for three weeks before heading for the spring camping at Fort Myers.

Bill Gleason, veteran coach, was in charge of the group which was made up of Rube Walberg, pitcher; Bing Miller, outfielder; Jimmy Dykes, third baseman, and Jack Boley, shortstop. Arriving Friday they will find three other regulars on the ground, Al Simmons, Jack Quinn and Bill Shores. Mickey Cochrane, the Mackmen's peppery catcher, is making the trip to the springs by automobile.

Sport Vignettes

Al Beckman, purchasing agent, who buys the typewriter ribbons on which this stuff is written, says he will sue for libel if we ever mention his name in this column . . . . Very well, then, we won't . . . . Of course, Primo Carnera couldn't be blamed for that Chicago fiasco. He's too big a man to resort to petty stuff . . . . Ringmaster Joe Mackrell of the sports writers' circus tonight has requested that no forward passes be thrown, out of deference to what happened in California on New Year's Day . . . . The scribes' defense isn't any too good, anyway, although they have been brushing up on the diamond formation . . . . Jim Miller, mayor of the South Side, is another one who doesn't want to be mentioned here unless we can say something good about him. So's he's out . . . . Only Pirate who is certain of his job this year is Suhr . . . . You'll get it in a minute . . . . Hockey Pirates' record for the season still stands at one consecutive victory . . . . Blame the Pitt basketball team's defeat on Waffle Week. Who ever heard of a basketball team training on waffles, anyway? . . . . Hear the one about the guy who took one look at Carnera and then signed the pledge for a year? . . . . And about the newest racket, which is promoting funerals? . . . . Seems it got its start in Chicago, like all of the others . . . . Red Mason says it's his age that is bending him over and not the exertion of picking up his fighters in recent bouts . . . . One of the features of the scribes' banquet tonight which has not been sufficiently stressed in the advance notices and really is worthy of laudatory comment is the fact that the guests will not be annoyed by a writers' quartet, as is annually the case at the New York fete or holocaust . . . . Our scribes are honest men and do all of their singing out in the rain, where they can wet their tonsils at virtually no cost whatsoever . . . . Having given up grid coaching, Hugo Bezdek at last will be able to meet his fellows as an equal at the baseball writers' banquet tonight . . . . A swell fellow said goodbye to all of us when Alex Stevenson died yesterday. We who knew him will miss him.

DUKES, TECH AND PITT FACE TESTS SATURDAY

COLLEGE GRID WORLD MOURNS STEVENSON

By JESS CARVER

Messrs Hogan Carlson and Davies, Pittsburgh's three college basketball coaches are very much worried over the assignments their quintets are face to face with for the coming week. Each of the three has a man-sized ball game confronting him Saturday.

Dr. Carlson must take his Pitt Panthers out into the wild and more or less woolly Middle West there to engage in a struggle with Notre Dame. Chick Davies and his Dukes entertain the swashbuckling basketeers of Loyola University of Chicago, the same ball club that has won 35 out of its last 36 games. Hogan sends his Tartans of Carnegie Tech against Thiel College in the Tech gym.

Tech's battle with Thiel finds the Tartans still without a victory over a tri-state district opponent. Although the new coach has been able to install his system much more effectively than he at first thought possible for the first year, he hasn't been able to win ball games. This is mainly due to a lack of good scoring material, the defensive qualities of his team being average.

LOYOLA POWERFUL

Because of its fine record, Loyola is going to put a capacity crowd in Duquesne's gym. The visitors beat the Dukes in Chicago when the latter were making their first trip of the year, early in December. They run their string of consecutive triumphs up to 35 before Purdue stopped 'em last week. Now they are working on a new run of victories, and are anxious to add the Dukes to the list for the second time.

All three of the local ball clubs are idle tonight, with most of the players and all the coaches being booked for appearances at the second annual sports dinner at the William Penn. Other teams in the section, however, will continue a week of intense activity. West Virginia meets Rider College at Trenton, N. J., in the fourth game of a long Eastern trip. Waynesburg battles the Edinboro Teachers at Edinboro. Wash-Jeff makes its second stop of an invasion of the eastern part of the state, playing Lafayette at Easton, and the Pitt Junior College five of Uniontown invades Latrobe for a game with St. Vincents.

GONE—A CHAMPION

The death of Alex Stevenson, assistant football coach at Pitt and one of the best known gridiron figures of the country, was a blow not only to the local university, but to countless followers of the game as well.

Stevenson and Pop Warner were bosom friends. At the coaches' meetings in New York each year and at football gatherings all over the country, wherever the mentors of the game gathered, the gentlemanly Alex was always an outstanding figure.

Local friends of the deceased coach are grief-stricken today and messages of condolence to those surviving him are pouring in from all parts of the country.

The Tip-Off

That dapper little chap, particularly perfect, you see parading the streets of Pittsburgh with Chick Meehan, head football coach at New York University.

Chick is here for the sports dinner tonight. He arrived in town this morning and almost immediately announced a plan for some limitation, maybe even barring, of the shoulder pad, and rubber less Kayoe in the Tech clinch next year and an extra helping of salad for all speakers at banquets.

Chick and Mrs. Chick threw a whale of a party for Pittsburgh friends in town for the New York game after the Army-Notre Dame game last fall. They installed Buck Brown as the guest of honor and made Mrs. John Egan mistress of ceremonies.

Chick believes that anyone who goes to a night club is a sucker and is not a bit backward about telling you so. Then his wife steps in and all wind up at Tex's.

Chick has a great fund of stories and most of 'em can be told most anywhere. He tells the one about the time he was playing Pitt in New York, when Pop Warner was still coach here.

Chick, a young coach, was much worried and had retired to his room at his hotel quite early in the evening. The phone rang and Chick answered.

"Hello, Chick! Come on down and have a sandwich and a cup of coffee. This is Pop. Who won, you? That game you're not it was already."

So Chick went down and met Pop and some friends. They retired to the grill of the Hotel Pennsylvania and after eating a bit Pop asked:

"But, Chick, what sort of a club have you, anyway?"

"Well," came back Chick, "it's pretty fair, though I've six sophomores on the line."

Brushing the crumbs from his vest Pop arose and said: "I'll bet that is all I wanted to know. Let's go."

Too late Chick realized what he had said. And the next day well, you should hear Chick tell what Pop did to those six sophomores.

Martin Approved As Carnera Foe

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Buster Martin, 200-pound boxer from Oklahoma, was named today by Seneca C. Taylor, state boxing commissioner, as a satisfactory opponent for Primo Carnera when the Italian giant appears here next Tuesday night.

Taylor, who yesterday rejected Theodore (Tiny) Roebuck, Kansas City Indian boxer, as Carnera's opponent on the grounds that the Indian was not good enough, announced his choice after Mique Malloy, Chicago promoter, spent the night at the long-distance telephone seeking a suitable foe without success.

Taylor said that Martin has knocked out Roebuck and is recommended as an eligible by Frank P. Martin, Jr., of the Oklahoma State Athletic Commission. Taylor is recommending Martin to Malloy who has not yet announced a decision.

Basketball squad of Fifth Avenue High School, which halted the mad dash tilleward of the Schenley High passers by handing the latter team a 34-25 defeat. Shorty Levine was the star of the contest with five field goals.

SOUTH PRESSES SECTION LEADER

Taking heart following Schenley's defeat at the hands of Fifth Avenue Tuesday, South High continued its campaign in the second half of the City League race with renewed vigor yesterday, and by defeating Ralston 28-17, climbed to within half a game of the leading Schenley passers.

South started its second string lineup against Ralston, and while the Ralstonites put up a brave game, managed to finish out in front.

While South was winning over Ralston, Westinghouse turned in a 35-17 victory over Aldermice in a second Section 1 contest. In Section II, Langley defeated Vocational 27 to 17. The lineups:

The Brooklyn club joined the National League in 1890, the fifteenth year of the league's existence. Charles H. Byrne was the first president of the club and William H. McGunnigle the first manager. In its first season, the Brooklyn club created a record by winning 86 and losing 43 games, for a percentage of .667, and copped the pennant. The team hit for .267 and fielded .943.

John Clarkson, who pitched against Brooklyn in that team's first game, is the only hurler to oppose two teams during their first contest, for he also took the mound against Pittsburgh in that club's first game. George T. Stallings, later the Braves' manager, was a catcher on Brooklyn's first team, although he did not play in its opening game. Charley Bennett, one of the greatest catchers that ever drew on a mitt, was Boston's maskman that day. A few years later he had both legs cut off in a railroad accident. Bob Lowe, who was the third baseman for Boston in this game, made baseball history when he banged out four home runs on Memorial Day, 1905. This feat was equaled the following year by Ed Delehanty, of the Phillies.

Pittsburgh Baseball Club officials stated this afternoon that inasmuch as Burleigh Grimes, star pitcher, was not expected in town until this evening there would be no conference with Grimes on his 1930 contract before tomorrow. Burleigh recently was mailed a contract, but so far as is known he has not signed it. In the event that he remains in Pittsburgh over night he probably will make a call at headquarters in order to talk business.

W. & J. BEATEN BY BUCKNELL

LEWISBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—Fry, a sophomore, tossed seven field goals and four fouls last night as Bucknell defeated W. & J., 43 to 34.

The Bisons picked up a lead after the first two minutes and were headed only once, although the Presidents were never more than five points behind, until the last two minutes.

Lewis and Martin played fine floor games for the visiting quintet.

Fry distributed his seven goals through the 30 minutes he played. His height gave him comparatively easy shots under the basket. Capt. Wadsworth dribbled the length of the floor for a goal late in the game. He and Marter made the visitors shoot from difficult angles most of the evening. The lineup:

SCHNEIDERS MEET PENN TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN.

The Ray Schneiders, winners of the first half championship of the West Penn League, and rated one of the best-balanced basketball quintets operating in this section this season, face one of their hardest tests of the year tonight when they oppose the Penn Five, of Sharpsburg, on the North Side Moose floor. In the other league contest, Kingsley House and Y. M. H. A. meet on the Y. M. H. A. floor.

The Schneiders, one of the few teams to defeat the Duquesne Lafayettes, Allegheny County League champions, were defeated in their first game of the second half schedule, but since then have been showing the same form that characterized their triumphs in the first round.

The North Siders possess a lineup that ranks with the best teams in the district, being composed mainly of former collegiate stars. The Schneiders are not taking anything for granted against the Penn Five and will start their regular lineup against the Sharpsburg passers.

GOLDENSONS WIN

The Goldensons nosed the champion Lefayettes last night on the South Side Market House floor in one of the best played and most interesting games of the County League season. With 15 seconds left to play and the champions on the long end by one point, Lisenring was fouled in the act of shooting and was awarded two free throws which he promptly made bringing the score to 29 to 28. The gun barked a few seconds later and the Lafayettes, minus their veteran coach and leader who is dangerously ill, lost their first game of the second half.

Both teams were crippled. Angelo being unable to play for the Goldensons, while the Lafayettes could master only five players.

Long's Sport Comment

Reds. In addition to the Luque-McWeeny trade and the three purchases mentioned, he has brought Infielder Tony Cuccinello from Columbus, signed two new coaches in Mike Doolan and Otto Williams, shipped Outfielder Bill Zitzmann to Newark for Infielder Westcott Kingdon, turned Kingdon and Catcher Leo Dixon over to Columbus, and made several other changes of lesser importance in his roster.

Douglas McWeeny

YESTERDAY'S deals are not likely to have any marked effect upon the pennant betting for 1930. The Luque-McWeeny swap resembles one of those little-for-little exchanges. From the viewpoint of age, Cincinnati gets the better of it, as McWeeny is only 31, whereas Luque will be 39 on August 4, but in the matter of pitching usefulness neither hurler looks like a rich pick-up. There was a time when Luque was the most effective flinger in the National League (he headed the entire list in 1923), but in recent years he has been going steadily down hill. Last season Adolfo, the only Cuban remaining in the majors since the Cubs dropped Catcher Mike Gonsales, won but five games against 16 defeats, pitched no more than eight complete games, and allowed an average of 4.50 earned runs per nine innings. McWeeny hurled only four complete games for Brooklyn in 1929, had just four victories to show against eight defeats at the finish, and was socked for an earned-run average of 6.10 per contest.

THE surprising part of the day's doings was the development that the Yanks had been able to obtain waivers on Durocher from seven other American League clubs. He didn't hit a lot last year, his average being only .246, but he is a fine fielder and might have helped one of the Barnard teams having an infield weakness.

The National League takes on another of baseball's so-called goat-getters in the coming of Durocher. The service that he gave to the Yanks was largely in the role of a "jockey," the youngster giving much of his time to "riding" the opposing players. As a result of these tactics he and Jack Onslow came to blows during the world series of 1928. It's a practice that ought to be squelched.

RODGERS, OUT TO PROVE ABILITY

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Jackie Rodgers, local Negro bantamweight, who has run his string of consecutive knockout victories up to six, is facing a genuine risk in his 10-round windup battle with Benny Schwartz, formerly of Baltimore, now of Pittsburgh, at Motor Square Garden, next Monday night. Schwartz defeated him at the Bridgeville Speedway last summer and displayed such fine boxing form in doing so that the fans are installing him a favorite to repeat, despite Rodgers' recent fine record.

There is a firm belief abroad that Rodgers is ducksoup for a good, fast-moving boxer. The fans point out that he has lost to Johnny Dunn, Johnny McCoy and Howard Mayberry twice each and to Schwartz and Willie Davies, among others, while he has been at his best against mixers whom he could reach with his heavy right fist.

Jackie had his choice of tasting on a scrapper who is very much in the National limelight just now or Schwartz, and he accepted Benny with the understanding that he would get the other foe later if he defeats Benny. He wants to disillusion the folks on the idea that he can't beat a good boxer. He believes he is a much improved combination boxer, fighter and puncher now than he was six months ago and that he can wade through all types of opposition. If he is wrong, he loses his "big shot" at the Garden. If he is right he gets two bouts where only one bloomed before. He is willing to take the risk.

Between Rounds

Matchmaker Jules Beck, of the Motor Square Club, yesterday completed the card for his show Monday night by signing Andy Andruzzi, of the East End, to meet Frankie Portland, of Ambridge, in the second bout, and Joey Kaltuch, of Lawrenceville, to battle Johnny Haggerty, of the same district, in the six-round opener. Jack Wells and Harry Williams, heavyweights, offer the eight-round semi-final.

Friends of Louden Campbell, former local boxer, who has been ill for some time, are planning to run a benefit show for him. M. J. (Jiggs) Hunt is in charge of arrangements and would like to hear from other friends of Louden.

Fans who like to see hard hitting should get an eyeful of their favorite dish in the main bout at the Motor Square tomorrow night, when Larry Madge, of Cleveland, hooks up with Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, in the 10-round main bout. Both are knockout punchers, with Randall a good boxer besides and Madge a slugging fool.

Two heavyweight bouts are on the amateur card of the P. A. A. Saturday night. Sparks Ewalt meets Young Sago in one bout, and George Cuiller tosses John Gotta in the other.

This also is the night that Primo Carnera meets his third American setup, Cowboy Billy Owens, Negro heavyweight, who recently fought under the name of Bill Gibbs. They are billed to tussle at Newark, N. J., with Billy Shaw boxing Buck Weaver in the semi-final.

Mike Butch and Johnny Warner will box the main bout of an amateur boxing show at the Pittsburgh Livestock next Thursday night. Johnny Hazel will meet Bob McCormick in another feature battle. Six bouts in all will be put on.

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, and Jackie Harmon, of Wheeling, have been matched to box a main bout at Wheeling next Monday night.

Chicago Pro Quint Plays in Johnstown

The Chicago Bruin basketball team, of the American League, with the famous Nat Holman and Nat Hickey in the lineup will play in Johnstown tonight, meeting the Kelso Five in the Johnstown High School gym.

BOWEN, BARBUTI BEATEN IN INDOOR RACES

PITT SPRINTER RUNS SECOND AT NEWARK

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Ray Barbuti, running his first competitive race since he won the Olympic 400-meter championship finished fifth in a field of five in a 50-yard dash at the Newark A. C. games last night.

Barbuti, who is at his best at the quarter mile and not the sprints was last from the start and crossed the line eased up and grinning, hopelessly out of it.

In the 50, Bill Bruder of the Newark A. C., was first in 5 3-5 seconds; Bob Talbot, Newark A. C., second; Bob Wiese, New York A. C., third; John McDonald, Yale fourth and Barbuti, running unattached, fifth.

LOSES THRICE

The big ex-Syracuse football star and Olympic hero, who was recently reinstated after talking himself into the bad graces of the Amateur Athletic Union, took too long to getunder way and by the time he was in full stride, his rivals had scuttled into the lead like a pack of rabbits.

Barbuti fared even worse in the 60-yard event of the sprint series. His 180 pounds of bone and muscle ripped one of the starting blocks loose from the floor and he was left at the post, not even getting started. The others finished in the same order as in the 50, Bruder being clocked at 6 4-5.

Barbuti, getting a slow start, was last in the 70 yard event of the sprint series, finishing five yards back of the winner.

BOWEN TRAILS

Eddie Roll, former Colgate flier now in the colors of the Newark A. C., showed the way to Pete Bowen of the University of Pittsburgh, national quarter mile champion; Johnny Gibson, Bloomfield, N. J., speedster and Eddie Blake of the Boston A. A., in a 500 yard special. The time of 60 seconds was fast for the flat track.

Willie Ritola, Finnish-American veteran, failed to appear for the two-mile handicap as advertised. In his absence sturdy young Joe McClusky, Fordham freshman, beat Gus Moore Pitt, by 50 yards, just the amount of his handicap. Moore ran from scratch.

JACKETS LOSE TO ALLEGHENY

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 6. — (AP.)—Allegheny won its second victory of the season over Waynesburg, defeating the Yellow Jackets handily in basketball here last night, 39 to 17.

After the two teams had fought to a 3-3 deadlock through the first 12 minutes, Allegheny pulled away and held a 14-7 advantage at the half.

Dennison's five field goals in the second half was the main factor in the lengthening of Allegheny's margin of triumph. Berger, Allegheny guard, covered the Waynesburg ace, Avery, so effectively that the Yellow Jacket forward caged only two field goals.

Dennison's 12 points constituted the best individual performance. Berger pressed him closely with 10. The lineup:

Dennison	F	O'Connell

CHINA TO DROP AIR MAIL PACT

NANKING, Feb. 6 (AP)—Several members of the State Council of the Nationalist government confirmed reports from Shanghai that the council had decided to repudiate its 10-year contract with Aviation Exploration Inc., an American concern which is giving air mail service from Shanghai to Hankow via Nanking. They declined to reveal the reasons for this decision.

The Kuomin official news agency said the ministry of communications, which had been operating a rival air mail service plans to extend its routes to all the major cities in the Yangtse Valley. It also stated that the ministry was expecting to receive additional Stinson-Detroiter planes shortly from the United States.

Research Is Becoming Key to Prosperity

By B. C. FORBES

THIS is a year of "cafeteria" prosperity. So declares John G. Lonsdale, able president of the American Association. He interprets "cafeteria" as meaning "help yourself."

In other words, to get business you have to go out and get it.

In the modern search for profitable business, says Mr. Lonsdale, the most valuable weapon is research.

SOME $250,000,000 will be spent this year on industrial research alone in the country. And the total amounts annually, for the most successful of our corporation heads are the ones who devote most attention and money to research.

Dr. C. K. Kress, research director of Eastman Kodak, a very generous spender in this field, recently said: "At the present time the research laboratory is the principal weapon of competition between manufacturers either in the same industry or in industries which are supplying different materials. A few years ago a manufacturer of vehicles would never have thought of a maker of musical instruments as being a competitor, but at the present time the most formidable competitor of the radio industry is the automobile industry."

DR. ARTHUR D. LITTLE claims that research work conducted by the present generation has resulted in the creation of 10,000,000 jobs.

P. S. Arkwright, when president of the National Electric Light Association, made this statement: "The research workers in pure science are the advance guard of civilization. They furnish in their discoveries the raw material, so to speak, for the industrial laboratories. Unless the discoveries of pure science continue, the applications of science to our practical affairs will before long reach a limit."

AS A fruit of his long and successful career in banking, Mr. Lonsdale, addressing a gathering of merchants this week, said:

"As far as I have observed, there are just three principal ways of conducting a business: First, by definite, formulated rules; second, by hunches; third, by facts, the first two are rapidly going into the discard. Some there are who, like their fathers and grandfathers, adhere to unchangeable rules of the thumb for shaping their business careers; and still others act upon sentiment, impulse and hunches.

"The third group adopt the plan of the scientist, by obtaining all the facts possible and examining them in all their varied relationship so that, guesswork and hazards may be eliminated before proceeding. As another mark of its progressiveness, this group makes judicious use of the printed word, for it has learned, and as I like to repeat, the valuable lesson that business must advertise or fossilize.

"THE MASTER HAND, THE GUIDING INSPIRATION—THE PILOT, IF YOU WILL—OF MODERN BUSINESS, IS NOT SO MUCH THE MAN WHO DIRECTS ITS DESTINIES AS AN EXECUTIVE OFFICER BUT RATHER THAT UNSEEN, INVISIBLE FACTOR REPRESENTED IN THE RESEARCH AND EXPERIMENTAL DEPARTMENTS.

"At this moment, hidden from our eyes, somewhere in our land, a patient research worker or some scientist is evolving new facts, or testing out some strange compound or device that on the morrow may revolutionize our very existence.

"Many old established businesses have their backs to the wall in a battle for existence. LUMBER FIGHTS AGAINST A SCORE OF SUBSTITUTES FRESH FROM THE LABORATORY; SILK FEELS THE THREAT OF ITS CHEMICAL RIVAL RAYON; RADIO GAINS POPULAR ATTENTION IN 10,000,000 HOMES AT THE EXPENSE OF MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS; TALKIES WIN FAVOR OVER THE SILENT FILM; COAL FIGHTS THE INVASION OF OIL BURNERS AND THE ICE MAN STRUGGLES TO MAINTAIN HIS TRADE AS MECHANICAL REFRIGERATION INCREASES ITS PATRONAGE.

"OUT in the Santa Clara Valley, California, THE APRICOT GROWERS HAD THROWN AWAY TONS OF APRICOT PITS YEAR AFTER YEAR. One day a scientist was called in. NOW A MILLION-DOLLAR INDUSTRY HAS DEVELOPED THROUGH CONVERTING THE KERNELS INTO OILS AND PASTES, USED IN MAKING SALADS, DRUGS, COSMETICS, FLAVORING EXTRACTS AND OTHER PREPARATIONS."

"TO THOSE whose minds are still attuned to the days of old, let me say: Look around you; see what is going on, modernize your old-fashioned ideas and traditions; no matter what your age, you are not too old to learn. Keep an open mind, read and study. There are books and magazines of every description whose pages the business man should find time to study for enlightenment. To individuals who protest they have no time for such things, I say, if you haven't time to read, you haven't time to succeed."

TONE IN STEEL TRADE MORE CHEERFUL

Wide Gains in Output Shown Since January 1 In Cleveland District

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

CLEVELAND, Feb. 6.—The striking upturn in the steel industry since December has imparted a more cheerful tone to this whole district.

E. J. Kulus, president of the Otis Steel Company, told me that in January the billings of his company, which had been flat on its back in December, showed an increase of 71.4 per cent in January over the preceding month. Moreover, he added that bookings for February for Otis and also for Midland Steel Products, of which he is also president, were good. January business, however, ran under the corresponding month of 1929.

The annual report for Otis for 1929 will not be ready for several weeks, but Mr. Kulus indicated that it would show an increase in net earnings over 1928, in spite of the drastic shrinkage of business in the final quarter of last year. Confident that no quarter in 1930 will be so flat as the last three months of 1929, Mr. Kulus thinks that the Otis Steel earnings in 1930 will make a favorable comparison with the 1929 record.

THINKS REVIVAL GENERAL

Asked whether the chief impetus to the steel business had recently come from the automobile industry, Mr. Kulus replied in the affirmative, but he thought that the revival was more general. Otis, he said, was busy also with railroad equipment orders, especially journal boxes, in which it specializes. The activity in the automobile business is, of course, largely seasonal, and represents an effort to stock up dealers in anticipation of the hoped-for spring consumer demand.

Mr. Kulus was one of the industrial executives whom President Hoover invited to the White House business conferences last November. He believes that Mr. Hoover's efforts to mitigate the effects of the recession are now bearing fruit.

"Mr. Hoover," the steel executive said, "is not necessarily responsible for the orders which are now flowing in, but his decisive action turned a business rout into an orderly retreat. He turned sentiment by acting at a time when others were sitting on the fence. His most important contribution was in heading off wage cuts, which I think would have come, and been disastrous, if the President had not acted promptly. At the conference, the first topic he mentioned was wage policy."

Mr. Kulus expressed the belief that the recession in the closing months of last year was not purely negative in its results. With business bad, he said, mills, which had developed the nouveau riche attitude, began critically to scrutinize their operating methods, and found a way of eliminating waste. Mr. Kulus said his own enterprises had found ways of cutting down operating costs and that he believed the steel industry generally had done so.

SEES LOWER COST

Incidentally Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland's silent financier, who recently consummated the Republic Steel merger, believes strongly that consolidations will tend to promote research in the steel industry, and show executives how to widen the gap between cost and selling price, while at the same time resulting in lower prices to consumers.

The Midland Steel Products Company recently decided to concentrate all its activities in supplying the automobile industry, putting all its eggs in one basket. Mr. Kulus defended this policy, saying that he believed the automobile industry was basic and played a decisive role in American prosperity.

He thought concentration was necessary in order to permit the company to develop its policy of anticipating the future requirements of its customers through research. He said that the automobile designers were already working on 1932 models, and that his technical men were looking that far ahead in studying parts problems.

SHEET AND TUBE NAMES MATHER

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 6.—S. Livingston Mather, Cleveland, has been today chosen a director of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, succeeding the late A. E. Adams. Mather is a son of Samuel Mather, and represents the leading stockholders in the company. It is claimed more than 40 per cent of Sheet and Tube common stock is controlled by the Mather family.

James A. Campbell, chairman of the board, was elected a member of the executive committee, succeeding Mr. Adams. Other members of this committee are: T. J. Bray, former president Republic Iron and Steel Company; H. G. Dalton, Cleveland, and Richard Garlick.

This change in Sheet and Tube's board is the second within a year, Harris Creech, Cleveland banker, having been made a member following the death of Harry Coulby, Cleveland, in 1929.

Stock Exchange Topics

RESUMPTION of the forward movement in stock following a period of heavy realizing in the morning, was indicative of the fact that Wall street is looking for a lower bank rate here this afternoon. On the other hand, the heavy selling during the forenoon period indicated quite as plainly that the recent buying movement in stocks has been based mainly on expectations of a reduction in the official money rate. It said to have last week's from protracted meeting of local reserve bank directors was the result of a desire on their own part to reduce the rate, without being able to obtain the sanction of the reserve board. It is estimated that no objection will be met from that direction today. On the contrary dispatches from Washington official circles seemed to make it plain that the situation now is entirely in the hands of directors of the New York bank.

Fulfilling expectations which had become increasingly stronger since the recent actions of the Bank of France and the Reichsbank, the Bank of England today voted a cut in its bank rate to 4½ per cent from the 5 per cent rate which had been in effect since early December. This it appears that world credit conditions are rapidly approaching normal, following a year in which such conditions had been thrown badly out of kilter as a consequence of the huge security speculation, centering chiefly in New York, but having also been felt in other important trading centers. Moreover, the action of the London bank indicates a feeling that its gold reserves are no longer in danger of a resumption of heavy drainage which carried them down to a figure that forced the institution to take the unusual action of boosting its rate a full 1 per cent to 6½ per cent on September 26, last, to check large withdrawals of its metal.

THE action at London and the expectation that it would be followed by a cut in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate after the closing today, was quickly reflected in open money market both here and at London. Call money at London dropped to 3½ per cent from yesterday's 4 per cent rate, and 30 and 90-day bill rates there were easier. In the local market leading dealers cut bill rates ⅛ of 1 per cent for all maturities, bringing the rate on 90-day acceptances to 3⅛-3¼ per cent, or to a level ⅛ of 1 per cent under the bank rate. Time money was easier in tone and call money yield again to 4 per cent in the noon hour.

Directors of the Bank of England undoubtedly were moved to their action in cutting the bank rate to 4½ per cent in no small measure by the strong position which the institution has built up since the rate was at its peak last September. Then gold reserves were down to a minimum, and the ratio was far below present levels. In the meantime gold holdings have been restored to the so-called Gunliffe level and the ratio of reserves to liabilities has mounted steadily. On several occasions last year the ratio was down in low 20 per cent levels. But presently it stands at 54.90 per cent against 52.80 per cent last week, and 46 per cent this time last year when the bank rate was 4½ per cent, the level which now prevails as a result of today's cut.

ALLEGHANY CORPORATION was taken in large blocks at the best levels of the movement today, reflecting operations of a strong group active in the stock. These people feel that the railroad stocks as a group are exceptionally cheap and the world-wide improvement in credit conditions which is one of the influential factors in the current strength of the stock market, is likely to promote steady investment buying of seasoned carrier shares. It is argued that the high-priced rails have litle appeal for the ordinary have little appeal for the ordinary trader owing to their restricted market but that Allegheny Corporation has a broad and active market at a relatively low price.

A study of United States Steel Corporation's earnings would indicate that on December 31, last, the corporation had earned surplus of $962,839.05, or more than $118 a share on the present common issued. It is not probable any such huge surplus will be shown in the balance sheet as of the end of 1929, partly because of many changes in the last 12 months through re-financing by the corporation.

Bell to Acquire Lehigh Telephone

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The Lehigh Telephone Company and the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania today applied to the Public Service Commission for approval of the sale of the former company to the latter for the purpose of unifying the telephone system in Pennsylvania. The Lehigh Telephone Company furnishes telephone service to the public in Lehigh, Northampton, Carbon, Schuylkill and Luzerne counties.

Erie Road Orders 2,150 Freight Cars

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Erie Railroad Company placed orders for 2,150 freight cars as follows: 450 gondola cars to be built by General Steel Car Company; 800 70-ton and 500 50-ton box cars to be built by American Car and Foundry Company and 200 side-door automobile cars by latter company. Pressed Steel Car Company will build 100 end-door box cars and 100 furniture cars.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Prospects of easier money, based on predictions that the New York Federal Reserve Bank would soon reduce its rediscount rate following the cut by the Bank of England, led to marked improvement in bond trading today. United States government securities, prominent foreign bonds and high-grade domestic listings, especially the rails, met the best demand in some time and made small advances.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and third-seconds of dollars):

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Head Up Again — Local Market Steady

MARKET HEADS HIGHER AFTER DECLINE

Irregular Tone Given Stock List by Change in Speculative Sentiment

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Frequent shifting of speculative sentiment imparted considerable irregularity to today's stock market. Prices opened higher, then reacted sharply before mid-day, when selling pressure was renewed against some of the high priced industrial specialties. Heavy buying of Fox Film and a selected group of utilities turned the course of prices upward again in the early afternoon. Trading failed to maintain the brisk pace set in the first 4,000,000 share session of the year yesterday.

Call money renewed at 4½ per cent but again dropped to 4 when the official opening rate was shaded in the outside market. Time money and commercial paper were unchanged. Wall street was divided in opinion as to whether the New York Federal Reserve Bank would follow the action of the Bank of England in cutting the rediscount rate this afternoon. Insofar as acting as a stimulus on business it was agreed in many quarters that a lowering of the rate might be more effective a few weeks later, but some bankers felt that an immediate reduction was likely to prevent the export of gold from London to New York.

EARNINGS REPORTS GOOD

There was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Several excellent 1929 earnings reports made their appearance. Crucible Steel and McKeesport Plate being among the many issues to make favorable comparisons with 1928. Steel production is reported to be slowly expanding, although the bullish effect of the increase has been offset to some extent by the lower prices.

In the early outbreak of selling, J. I. Case dropped 6 points and Johns Manville and Otis Elevator 5 each. A renewal of selling pressure against Simmons carried that issue down nearly 4 points to a new low for the year at 76¼. Auburn Auto dropped 3½ and Columbia Gas 3.

The brisk bidding for Fox Film apparently was predicated on the theory that a successful reorganization program would be brought forward to avert the receivership asked for by certain creditors and minority stockholders. The stock was marked up more than 4 points to a new high for the year at 39½, which contrasts with a low of 16½, when the receivership talk was at its height.

GAS SHARES RISE

Detroit Edison, Stone and Webster and Peoples Gas were marked up 4½ to 5½ points in the early afternoon rally.

The cold weather in the east stimulated the demand for the shares of th anthracite carrying railroads. Reading moving up nearly 4 points and Lackawanna 2½.

Western Union converted an early loss of 2 points into a gain of 2 points, and American Woolen common and preferred, Canadian Pacific, Columbia Carbon, Calumet and Arizona, General Asphalt, General American Tank Car and National Lead sold 2 to 6 points higher.

January Sales of Woods Agency Up

January was the greatest month for all time in regular written life insurance since the founding of the Woods agency in 1880. A total of 4,012 people applied for $20,067,592 of Equitable life insurance in a single month. This does not include $5,504,000 of employes group insurance which, if counted, would make the total written business for January $25,607,592.

For the Woods agency it was a big step toward the goal of $100,000,000 of new paid for life insurance in the year 1930, marking the culmination of a five-year program when the agency celebrates is fiftieth anniversary this fall.

I. C. C. PROBING FREE BUSES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today began an investigation of the motor coach activities of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in New York City that may have a far-reaching effect upon all the railroads entering the city.

The long-smouldering fight between the Pennsylvania and the B. & O., on account of the extension of passenger service by the latter to the metropolitan area by means of free transfer of passengers between Greater New York and Jersey City, has finally come into the open with the filing by the Pennsylvania of tariffs providing for a free transfer service to compete with that of the B. & O.

These tariffs were filed February 2 and immediately there was objection on the part of the New York Central, Erie, Lackawanna and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie roads. Nominally they are against the Pennsylvania, but actually they are against the B. & O.

These roads asked for the suspension of the tariffs and an investigation of the whole subject by the commission. The commission said it would suspend the tariffs for seven months and would make a thorough investigation.

Pressed Steel Car Co.
Outlook Improves

BY GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE Pressed Steel Car Company re-established its operations on a satisfactory basis last year. Preferred dividend requirements were earned for the first time since 1925 and a substantial margin of earnings was left for the common stock.

Net profit of $1,729,335 which was equivalent to $1.83 a share on the 394,685 shares of common stock reflected a marked increase in the demand for railroad cars during the present year. It was in sharp contrast to the income accounts of recent years.

In 1928, when demand for railroad equipment was at its lowest point, a deficit of $247,718 was reported. An income tax refund of $397,171 was received during the year. After applying this to income a profit of $149,452 was shown.

Outlook Favorable

THE company is starting the present year with an even more favorable outlook than at the beginning of 1929. Production is at about 85 per cent of capacity and the output at the present rate has been sold for several months in advance. The buying of rolling stock has been particularly heavy in the Chicago district and production at that point has been sold up to the end of May.

While it is impossible to estimate the future purchases of railroad equipment, the company has exceptionally good prospects for earning more in the present year than in 1929 if even a moderate volume of orders is booked for delivery in the latter half of the year. The company is assured satisfactory profits in the first half.

Equipment Demand

IN the five years prior to 1929 the Pressed Steel Car Company, in common with other railroad equipment makers, was suffering from increased railroad efficiency. Following the end of Federal control the railroads made steady progress in improving their operating methods. The time required to make freight shipments was cut to a fraction of the former amount. Rolling stock was kept in better repair.

As a result of this the carriers needed fewer cars to move the nation's freight in spite of the fact that loadings showed a large rate of increase during the period. Instead of having to buy new equipment in proportion to their growing business and the rate at which old cars were wearing out, the roads found it unnecessary to buy more than a small number of cars.

Builders Suffer

BEGINNING in 1924 the demand for new railroad cars started to decline and a low point was reached in 1928. In the latter months of that year, however, the carriers found that they had practically exhausted the surplus of equipment created by their improved operating methods and they again entered the market. Their purchases at the close of 1928 were not delivered until 1929 so that last year was the first to reflect the changed state of affairs.

It is generally believed that in the future the railroads will have to buy cars in fairly large quantities to replace worn out equipment and to provide for expanding traffic. Their purchases may vary sharply with fluctuating business conditions but the car builders feel that they are unlikely to experience such a period of lean years as has just come to a close.

A strong financial position at the beginning of the period of depression made it possible for the Pressed Steel Car Company to continue the payment of dividends on its $14,430,600 of 7 per cent preferred stock. The improvement shown in earnings in 1929 greatly increases the security of the preferred dividends.

LONDON BANK RATE CUT

LONDON, Feb 6.—The Bank of England today announced the reduction of its rediscount rate from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent.

The 5 per cent rate had been in effect since December 12 when the rate was reduced from 5½ per cent.

Today's reduction did not occasion great surprise in financial circles here in view of recent rate reductions on the continent.

However, there was much comment on the fact that the reduction should have come just today inasmuch as the majority of foreign exchanges were moving against the British exchange rather than in favor of it.

It was felt that a day when foreign exchanges were more favorable for Great Britain should have been chosen for the announcement of the reduction.

EXPECT CUT AT N. Y.

NEW YORK, Feb 6.—Wall Street looks for a reduction in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank to 4 per cent today. The directors of the bank will meet at the close of the market and it is believed they will be guided somewhat by the Bank of England's action in reducing the rate to 4½ per cent, as well as to the recent reduction of the rates of the Bank of France and the Reischbank.

The last reduction in the New York bank rate was made on November 15, when the rate was put down from 5 to 4½ per cent. Only two weeks earlier a reduction from 5½ to 5 per cent had been ordered.

ACCEPTANCES LOWERED

Bankers acceptance rates have been reduced ⅛ of 1 per cent for all maturities. New rates are as follows: 30, 60, 90 and 120 days, 3⅞@3¾ per cent. 150 and 180 days, 4@3¾ per cent.

Pennsy Proposes Capital Changes

Stockholders of Pennsylvania Railroad will be asked to increase the authorized capital stock by $170,000,000 to $870,000,000.

It is not planned to issue any additional stock at this time but to provide stock for future capital purposes.

Enormous Wastage Of California Gas

LOS ANGELES, Feb 6. Waste of natural gas in California in 1929 amounted to 42 per cent of production, which was 558,000,000,000 cubic feet, according to C. C. Brown, gas administrator.

German Auto Maker Reduces Prices 9%

BERLIN, Feb. 6. Adam Opel A. G. has reduced prices 7 per cent to 9 per cent. The smallest car now costs less than 2,000 marks (about $475.)

Wholesale Price Trend Is Lower

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Downward drifting of general price levels last week was indicated today by Census Bureau averages. The figures following give the index of wholesale prices constructed on the basis of 100 equaling 1926 averages, for the week and comparable periods, and likewise give the prices prevailing for a composite ton of steel products on like dates.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Words and Music

THEY were typical New Yorkers, which means that neither of them was born in New York.

Oliver Crauford came from a farm in the Mid West to a fresh water college near by. He had a life-seized hunch that he ought to "do something" with his music, so he went on from the freshwater college to New York.

His uncle, with whom he had lived, was just as well satisfied. He said that Oliver was shiftless and had much rather bang a piano than get up at four and milk and then plow all day.

Oliver had a little money. He got a job in an Italian cafe playing the piano from 6 until midnight. The place being a speakeasy had to close at midnight.

So Oliver got a room on the third floor of a place down in the Village. The third floor was the top floor. It had a dormer window and a sort of shelf ran all along the rear of the house, and the view embraced the rear of two garages and a wholesale produce place where left-overs tossed out back often became odorous.

Oliver slept until 11 and banged his rented piano until 2.

The other typical New Yorker was Janet Peavy. She came from a village up in Vermont. Janet won all the composition essay prizes in school and had written pieces for the Weekly Tocsin, th local paper.

Janet also had a hunch—it was that she was literary.

Sought Atmosphere

Janet had fluffy blonde hair—the sort no one would believe was natural. She also had a thorough knowledge of the wickedness of New York and especially of its youth. She had read all about this in confession magazines and other stories. But that didn't worry her in the least.

There would be no men, young or old, to bother her. She was in New York for business and not funny business, either, business to do solely with literature.

And Oliver also knew all about the wickedness of New York. He had read much from an ancient volume found in the farm attic entitled "New York After Dark or the Lures of Broadway," right down to the modern stuff.

Hard-boiled blonde gold-diggers might accost him 50 times a day but he would merely look them up and down and give them the laugh. He was here for one thing—to make some of the accepted composers step aside and give him his share of glory.

Janet Peavy found a room down in the "Village" on the top floor, which was the third floor. It had a dormer window in the rear with a ledge running along under it. The view took in the back of two garages and the rear of a wholesale produce place where passe fruits and vegetables in the back yard often became odorous.

Oliver had been in the Village a month or more before Janet arrived.

Janet dreamed dreams, but she was a practical girl and straightway got herself some work with a trade publication which gave her forenoon work and provided room rent and money for "eats."

Oliver continued to hammer out this hit and that flop and whatever was desired at the musical Italian speakeasy, and he continued to work on compositions.

Janet made her rounds and neatly typed the sordid commercial information she had gleaned which she turned into the daily trade paper and for which she was paid weekly.

It wasn't literature, but one had to live and one had to get a start. In her spare time she mapped out a best-seller novel.

Oliver was coming back from his 11 o'clock breakfast one morning when he met Janet. He didn't know that a link of his watch chain (he still wore one) had broken and it was dangling.

Without thinking, just in her own natural way, Janet stepped toward him and said: "I beg your pardon, but—"

"That's all right, girlie," Oliver broke in, "and many thanks, but I'm not interested."

He walked on.

Janet stood rooted to the spot a moment, her cheeks burning with anger and then with shame. Did the fool think she was trying to pick him up? She wouldn't look back, but strode on her way.

Oliver didn't look back. He smiled grimly and went on and up to his room.

Stare at Each Other

A few times some unfortunate dame or other had said "Hello sweetheart" to him when he was coming home from the piano playing, but this was the first time one of those floosy little gold-diggers had tried to make a sucker of him right on the street in daylight.

It was some time later. Oliver was in his shirt sleeves, leaning out of his window, elbows on the sills. He was trying to imagine those garages and the produce rear as a sylvan scene. He wanted to do a Spring-song theme that would be full of both beauty and pep.

Janet, in her room, put some water in a vase and put in a few flowers that a woman in one of the shops, where she called for trade journal news, had given her.

In setting the vase out the window she set it on something uneven and it tipped over, sending a stream of water along the ledge to Oliver's elbows.

"What the heck!" growled Oliver, leaning out to see what had wet his elbows, just as Janet had said "Fudge" and was picking up the vase.

They stared at each other. Janet popped back into her room suddenly, her cheeks aflame. This was the big sap who had insulted her!

Oliver stepped back into his room scowling.

That little blondy dame was after him for sure. She probably watched where he went and got a room there purposely to vamp him!

Oliver went to the rented piano and thumped it considerably.

Over and over he banged away at it.

And Janet, her work finished early, was all set to tackle the second chapter of her best-seller. She wouldn't let that insolent chap bother her.

Oliver Crumbles

Janet flopped on the bed to rest.

A couple days later Oliver ran right into Janet. He was going to the speakeasy and Janet was coming from the office with her Saturday pay envelope.

Oliver looked at her coldly.

"Thinks she can get me interested by being snooty," Oliver thought. He was picking up an amazing vocabulary, hanging around that speakeasy piano.

Sunday Janet went to a nearby church and, of course, Oliver slept. In the afternoon he felt like doing some big work on that spring song idea.

Janet, feeling her New England conscience properly treated by the church-going, sat down to write something just a little more poignant, a little more satirical and a little more humorous.

"Da-dum-te-dum, da-dum-te-day, Doo-de-doo-dar!"

There the big sap was again, Janet told herself. She was also picking up some new stuff for her vocabulary.

The ancient old typewriter keys went madly: "clackerty-clack-a-clack-a-clack."

Janet thought she heard him grumble.

She wrote harder than ever.

Oliver thumped away, over and over. It wasn't a bad thing, rather jolly—if he could get a little more spring beauty into it.

Janet lost her temper. She had written the same sentence twice. She went to the dormer window to get a breath of air.

Oliver had also worked up a case of nerves and went to his window to light a cigaret and rest a moment.

They found themselves staring at each other.

"Er—can't you soft pedal that gosh-awful typewriter of yours?" Oliver asked.

"Thanks, but I'm not interested," snapped Janet, handing him back his own words to her.

"But it distracts me."

"Of all the nerve! What do you think that tin pan you thump all the time does to me?"

"I am composing—music, you know."

"Well, I'm composing, too—a novel. That is, I'm trying, but the silly thing you play over and over makes me want to write words for it," said Janet. "Silly words."

Janet Writes Words

"Gosh, I wish you would—only of course you couldn't," Oliver cried.

"Fool words running through my head all the time. You go back and play the hideous thing slowly and I'll do it. Play it over—very slowly."

"Mean it?"

Janet nodded and stepped back for a pencil and pad of paper. Oliver began playing. After a while—quite a while—he stopped and came to the window.

"What you got?" he called.

Janet read it:

"Listen, I apologize for being rude. I thought you was a fresh gold-digger. Now I can't bring the piano in to you, but if I leave my door open won't you come in and sing what you wrote?"

"I might as well—and I'm not afraid of you or anyone else," replied Janet.

She went in and to his "composition" she sung her composition:

"When Jubal heard de tom-cat sing,
Good ol' Jubal!
He grab him fer a fiddle string,
Good ol' Jubal!
He skun dat tom-cat quick as quick,
Hitch de strings on a crooked stick
An' made a harp dat was mighty slick—
Good ol' Jubal!"

Janet laughed. Oliver jumped up and begged her to write more verses. She was there two hours. Then they shook hands.

"That's worth a million spring songs, thanks to your words—er—er what's your name?"

They exchanged names.

He put the song over and a couple others, words by Janet.

He was right, they did make a good team, musically and matrimonially.

Hanson Case No Plainer By Judge's Explanation

Matter of Pressure for Modification Calls for Clarification.

Judge William T. Darr, of Jefferson County, who was the officiating judge in the case of William Hanson, convicted of slot machine gambling operation, whose original sentence of four months was modified so that he was released after serving 16 days, has issued a statement explanatory of his part in the incident which caused public indignation.

It is to the effect that Hanson was convicted of operating only one slot machine, in only one place, and that the original sentence was excessive in view of the precedent in the shorter sentences of others charged with equal or greater crimes of the same nature. He maintains Judges Josiah Cohen and Thomas J. Ford concurred in the modification of the Hanson sentence.

The explanation leaves the matter right where it has been, as Judge Cohen had previously stated that he had nothing to do with the reduction of Hanson's term. Judge Cohen further stated that pressure had been made upon Judge Darr to modify the sentence and that he, himself, had been importuned to suggest it to Judge Darr, but had refrained from doing so.

"I concurred with the other two judges in the original sentence when asked by Judge Darr," Judge Cohen declared, "although I had, judicially speaking, no relation to the subject matter. Subsequently thereto great pressure was brought to bear upon the trial judge to modify the sentence."

In a subsequent paragraph Judge Cohen states:

"I was importuned from more sources than one to induce Judge Darr to modify the sentence. I positively refused."

The public view of the matter now is that the source of this pressure is what should be cleared up, in view of the unusual situation that has arisen, explanations of which thus far have tended to cloud rather than make plain. The popular conception of court dignity is that none would dare make a suggestion as to the duty of a judge in a case he is considering except in open court. If there is extra-legal influence around the Courthouse, the public, which pays the salaries of the judges, has a right to know about it, and to be protected against it.

The Sun-Telegraph does not presume to tell any judge his duty in this matter, but, since Judge Cohen has stated that attempts to influence him and Judge Darr were made, it sees nothing wrong in pointing out that the public will be more completely satisfied when all the facts are known. Those who would influence a court secretly certainly should not be shielded.

It is a matter in which the Bar Association should be interested. One about which the entire bench of the Common Pleas Court should be concerned. And one in which the public, above all, is greatly interested.

Ohio-Lake Canal Claims Show Reason for Digging

A commendable feature of those attending the hearing of the Ohio River-Lake Erie Canal project in Washington was the unanimous spirit of co-operation among boosters of the canal from the Pittsburgh, Beaver valley and Youngstown districts.

The Army engineers were given assurance that the canal was an economic necessity in the form of tonnage estimates, and the statements of would-be shippers that they considered construction of the canal essential to the maintenance of freight rates that would permit entrance to markets on a basis comparing equitably with those enjoyed by industries having the advantage of water and rail-water shipping.

The Sun-Telegraph congratulates the promoters of the canal on the completeness and significance of their case. With them, it will live in hope that it was sufficiently impressive to bring about the desired result.

Equal Rights for Women

They're Getting Them in England.

Even in staid old England women are coming into their own. They have the vote, now they are demanding equal rights with men to rob, steal and burgle—and are getting them. Out of every five crimes reported to police, a woman is prominently involved in one. At the present rate of progress they will soon be neck and neck with the so-called sterner sex.

Raids on country houses are the favorite form of woman's new activities. Shop window robberies and safeblowing are a close second. The bobbed-haired bandit that our British cousins used to read about in the States is now seen in quiet English lanes and hedgerows—a worthy successor to such eminent highwaymen as Robin Hood and Carver Doone.

Consider this also from Scotland Yard itself:

"Women have improved ten times on the old methods formerly used by criminals—unlike the men."

Silence a la Carte

Elimination of Noise Will Be Relief to Restaurant Patrons.

If there is one place where silence is massacred, outside of a boiler factory, it is the average restaurant, Bellows of "Draw one," "Sunny side up," answering yells from the kitchen, and the crashing bombardment of dishes, knives and forks, assail and benumb the eardrums of hapless patrons.

Now it will all be changed, if Restaurant Management Magazine puts its campaign over. It pleads for noiseless spoons and rubber cutlery. Ticker machines will transmit code numbers of dishes to the kitchen. Waiters will use the Cherokee sign language. In place of china all dishes will be made of inaudible material, and will be stacked under water.

Silence will come like poultice to heal the blows of sound, and patrons of hash emporia will heave a sigh of relief. But Utopia will not come until waiters hand over to the police persons who partake loudly of their soup or crunch their toast with unnecessary noise.

SUN-TELEGRAPH'S PLATFORM

For Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania

1—A better, cleaner, more beautiful city.
2—Rapid Transit.
3—Repeal or modification of "blue law."
4—Establishment of Pittsburgh metropolitan district.
5—Community Fund for charities.
6—Town Hall, seating at least 15,000.
7—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
8—Development of river transportation.

Undesirable Skyscrapers -:- Drawn by Nelson Harding

When grimy vapors hide the sun,
And smoke clouds, turning day to night,
Hang heavily upon the air,
Our skyline's not a pleasant sight.

The beauty of the city's dimmed
By these skyscraping clouds that rise
Like ugly towers wavering
Fantastically toward the skies. —N. H.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Chicago Goes Broke

THE last time we were in Chicago Mr. Tunney was lounging lizardly on the canvas after having handed the butler the wrong pair of gloves.

"Bugs" Baer

It seems impossible that Chicago is bankrupt after that glorious evening. And we assure the city that it will be all right if it can only hire Referee Dave Barry to do the counting.

At the ratio of 14-to-10 we know that Chicago can pull itself out of the Olympian slump and resume its tableaux of quaint tribal warfare.

It may be a lesson to other towns not to build yourself one jump from the lake in a southwest breeze. Still, having a town go broke on you isn't quite so personal as being broke in the town.

We don't know what a city does when the sheriff is rapping the long tattoo on the emergency brakes. But if Chicago wants to resume its solvent apparatus let it commission its traffic cops to auction off its parking space.

Either that or it can cut up Lake Michigan into showerbaths. Why not have every school child bring its teacher a big, red apple and have the mayor open a goody shop?

They tell us that the Chicago police and firemen haven't been paid this winter and threaten to go into business for themselves.

What Chicago needs is New York's Welcome Committee of stalwart citizens in telescopic hats. New York hasn't had a financial tremor since Einstein explained his theory on City Hall steps and Wall street forgot that boilers should have safety valves.

We would like to stick in a sealed bid in case Chicago has really landed on the moss-covered chute. But buying a town isn't a question of string and wrapping paper. The ancient city of Rome was once sold to the highest bidder but the praetorian guard knocked off the new landlord one night after it got tired of waiting in line for the second show.

We do not know the used value of a huge city like Chicago, Paris or London. Chicago is a world capital and would be a valuable hunk of property. But who wants to own a city and pay a tax assessor for making you mad?

In the old days in my old home town of Philadelphia they say that certain gentlemen used to buy the city, one precinct at a time. But they never went in for goodwill, boundary lines and everything in a lump.

We will buy Chicago if we can work up to that pitch gradually by merging Toledo, Mauch Chunk, Newburgh and Shrewsbury Junction on 30 days' trial.

THE INEVITABLE CHOICE

By Herbert Kaufman

THE note of regret which signalizes Mr. Taft's retirement from the supreme bench MUST remove any lingering stings that his pride suffered when 46 states cast their vote against his re-election to the presidency. He returns to private life accompanied by national affection and followed by the country's prayers for an early restoration of health. Conclusions may considerably DIFFER as to his administrative capacities, but history will never challenge his JUDICIAL worth.

The rift between Roosevelt and Taft, which finally split the Republican Party and placed Woodrow Wilson in the White House, would never have occurred had Chief Justice Fuller yielded to Roosevelt's request for his resignation.

Wayne McVeagh, the emissary chosen to negotiate that delicate transaction, later confided to close friends that Fuller would have gladly made way for Taft, if anybody but "that man with the teeth" had brought proper influence to bear.

M'VEAGH, returning from his mission, brought answer that "the chief justice never resigns." Whereupon Roosevelt, with characteristic impetuousity, slammed his fist on the desk and shrilly exclaimed, "Then, by God, I'll make Taft the next President of the United States."

A promise subsequently fulfilled, but quickly after repented to the infinite sorrow of history and lasting discomfiture of G. O. P. leaders. Mr. Taft utterly lacked the political adroitness essential to the execution of executive programs. And to that incapacity may be laid the several failures of his regime.

The Roosevelt blocs in House and Senate, headed respectively by Speaker Cannon and Henry Cabot Lodge, consistently defeated his projections.

White House employes regularly rendered reports to the Bull Moose camp—confounded his favorably progressing plans for a liberalization of the trading pact with Russia—and furnished Lodge with secret information which enabled that bitterest of enemies to prevent indorsement of Taft's world peace treaties by the precarious margin of one vote.

EXCEPT for the unrelenting spite of that ONE man civilization might have possessed an effective instrument in 1914 to abort the vastest catastrophe that ever flailed humanity.

Tomorrow, estimating Mr. Taft's intrinsic qualities with due deliberation, will paint his portrait in bolder strokes and stronger pigments than controversial opinion inclines to picture the incompetent self-interpreter of 1912.

Any DELAY in the nomination of a successor would have swept business with indecision, AGAIN depressed the stock market and left the country on tenter-hooks at a moment when America must LEAST doubt the stability and constitutional expertness of its tribunal of last resort.

THE many moot issues pending in Congress, and PRONOUNCEDLY those bearing upon prohibition, required the immediate replacement of Mr. Taft with a jurist of EQUAL distinction—a jurist UNTAINTED with suspicion of EITHER wet or dry support—a jurist broadened by the widest possible experience, and, above all ELSE, a devoted constitutionalist with an especial genius for clear and succinct exposition. These attributes are notably vested in the new chief justice.

Fence-mending executive would have dallied with the situation and opportunized it for partisan profit.

Nothing could have quelled the insinuations that Mr. Hoover is responsive to certain objective forces, as much as this striking exhibition of executive vision and independence in an hour so heavy with potential crisis.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD! ∴

By Elsie Robinson

IF Martha Allen came across a box of dynamite she'd be mighty cautious about touching it. If someone gave her a delicate piece of mechanism she'd treat it with the greatest care. And if she were led into the United States mint, she'd never dream of robbing that treasure. For Martha Allen is, generally speaking, an honest, discreet and intelligent woman.

Yet every day of her life Martha misuses something that's infinitely more powerful than dynamite, more delicate than the most complicated machinery, and more precious than gold . . . A HUMAN MIND.

That human mind happens to belong to Martha Allen's 15-year-old son.

She tells it what to think.

She forces her decisions upon it.

She worms herself into its secrets.

She betrays its confidences.

All this seems very terrible to young Peter. He's a shy, sensitive youngster, considerably tangled up with himself, but given time, he'll figure things out. But his mother won't give Peter time. If he's slow about making up his mind, she makes it up for him. All his timid fancies and speculations she digs out, as she digs out dust in spring housecleaning.

Peter tries to stop her. He needs . . . oh, how desperately he needs . . . to be left alone in his own mind. It's his hiding place . . . his growing place. And he feels sick and rebellious and ashamed when someone crashes into his mind and drags him out. He tries, in his futile way, to make his mother see this—

But she thinks he's just sulking. Doesn't Peter realize how mamma loves him? Doesn't Peter understand that mamma knows what's best for him? How can he be so ungrateful, after all mamma has done for him? How can he hurt poor dear mamma so?

Peter knows she's getting the argument all wrong. He knows that it's he, Peter, who is being hurt—not mamma. But he can't explain. With her flood of words and emotions . . . and her terrible confidence in her own rightness . . . she strikes him dumb.

Makes you feel sorry for the poor kid, doesn't it? Yet we all do things like that in the name of love. Just because someone's our son or daughter or sister or brother or husband or wife or friend, we think we've a right to know and pass judgment on all their thoughts. We would hesitate about entering their bedrooms without knocking, but we bolt right into their minds, without scruple. It's indecent. The other fellow has a right to his own mental privacy. It's the most sacred place in his life and no one, however near or dear, has a right to violate that sanctuary.

Text for Today Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah liii:4,5.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

NEVERTHELESS, the calculation shows the almost explosive expansion of a protozoan population under favorable conditions. And in this fact lies the power of these microscopic creatures.

The countless swarms of microorganisms in the sea are eaten by minute crustaceans, and these in their turn are eaten by fish, and the fish by other fish or by ourselves; constantly and by the million they are being devoured, but the survivors can multiply so rapidly that the supply is inexhaustible.

H. G. Wells

And the entry of a few parasitic protozoa into the blood of a man may fill him in a very few days with pullulating millions of invisible enemies—enough to interfere seriously with his vital processes, perhaps enough to destroy him.

There is another important aspect of the curious methods of multiplication that are found among these tiny creatures, another reason why they can increase so rapidly.

We have noted that the individuals are very small and that they do not survive for long. But let us consider again the way in which they cease to be.

A protozoon ends its individual existence by dividing its own body into living bits—into two halves, or into a greater number of fragments. Every one of these bits grows into a complete new individual. In the protozoa there are no corpses; every bit of protozoan tissue continues to multiply and grow. It is potentially immortal; although the individuals exist only for an hour or so their tissue lives forever.

The protozoa, then, put their whole weight into the business of reproduction. They do not relegate that all-important task to a small part of their bodies. The method that we have just discussed is a sexless one, but we may pause for a moment to consider the sexual methods that they sometimes employ, for in this they are equally whole-hearted.

The details of sexual reproduction vary in the different kinds of protozoa. But the essence of the process is nearly always this: a complete mixing together of the substance of two originally separate individuals. They meet and come together in pairs, and they blend as completely as drops of water run together.

They achieve an intimacy of union that we can never aspire to, becoming in a perfectly literal sense one flesh. And the resulting blend lives on as a single thing, after the manner of protozoa.

These protozoa are divided into four classes. There are first the Rhizopoda, which include amoeba; their name means "root-footed," and is an allusion to their power of everlastingly changing their shape by protruding and withdrawing blunt lobes, or fine branching threads of living substance.

The other kinds of protozoa are more definitely and permanently shaped. Two orders of this class are important—the Foraminifera which build shells of corbonate of lime and the Radiolaria which build flinty shells of silica.

When these creatures multiply by division of their bodies their offspring abandon the parental shell and make new ones of their own. All the Radiolarians and many of the Foraminiferans live floating in the waters of the sea.

There is consequently a perpetual soft rain of abandoned shells dropping on the ocean floor. The creatures are incredibly numerous and they can multiply rapidly, so it will be manifest that infinitesmal though they are their accumulations may be immense.

In some places the sea-floor is covered deeply with a grayish ooze called "globigerina ooze," which consists largely of billions and billions of the abandoned shells of a foraminiferan called Globigerina.

In the deep sea, where the physical conditions are such that abandoned limy shells are redissolved in the water, only the siliceous shells of a radiolaria remain and form a deposit called "radiolarian ooze."

In the course of past ages such oozes have hardened into earth and rocks, and as, during the evolution of our globe, the sea has advanced and receded over most of its surface, they have been left as geological strata on dry land.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Every high priced cafe in New York has its quota of eccentric patrons who do not dine according to custom. Some are persons of prominence, others are unknown and still others are those touched by some freakish vagary.

In a Park avenue cafe on Thursday evening of each week a gentleman in full evening dress occupies a table for two alone. For many years it was his custom to dine there on that special evening with his wife. She died tragically in a sea disaster and it is his way of showing he has not forgotten.

The dinner of a famous portrait painter never varies. He is at the same table nightly in one of the best known restaurants and the waiter brings him a tea pot of hot water, a plain lettuce salad and three graham crackers. His tip is always a silver dollar.

Wall Street has an eccentric who orders a glass of milk each noon day and takes from his pocket a sandwich, made at home and wrapped in oiled paper. He makes no effort to hide his whim. And why should he? He happens to own the building which houses the restaurant.

Perhaps the most consistent host in a hotel dining room is the guest of an expensive inn who has every night he has been in town for the past five years entertained from six to 20 people. His restaurant patronage is said to total more than $50,000 yearly.

A doddering old fellow toddles into a high priced cafe on Fifty-seventh street daily, orders lavishly, leaves a dime for the waiter and gravely hands the cashier 25 cents for his meal. He has no patience with modern prices and his son arranged for him to eat there, paying the huge difference on the q. t.

But the most unusual diner of all is a novelist who at intervals likes to have soup at one place, fish at another, the entree at still another and so on through salad, desert and coffee. He walks from place to place, sometimes spending two or three hours in the culinary caprice.

I am told Thomas A. Edison has, so far as is procurable, every article that ever appeared about him in print. They are kept in perfectly indexed files and fill a huge room.

* * *

Mr. Edison enjoys publicity—as who does not?—and admits it. Every reporter has come in contact with the shrinking type who professes to abhor publicity but who is the most approachable of all. He is the sort who never lets you get away without his latest photograph and a mimeographed biography.

One of the easiest and most agreeable gentleman of importance to interview was the late Chauncey Depew. He knew the art of transmuting dull questions into bright copy. Among other things, in his last interview, he attributed his old age to the fact that he had suffered from two incurable diseases most of his life, which was true.

One of New York's famous hypochondriacs sports an engraved silver box in which he carries his assortment of pills. He told me at a dinner one night recently he was tortured by 14 different complaints. Nothing, however, seems to have affected that bird's appetite.

The cast of Earl Carroll's musical show gave an after-theater party in honor of its producer recently and following the midnight spread put on their performance as they thought it should be done instead of the way it was written.

They are telling of a notoriously dumb actress who appeared in Ferenc Molnar's unsuccessful play, "The Glass Slipper." When the playwright, who speaks almost every language but English, visited New York he was given a reception. The actress who had participated in the flop, was present. After imbibing a flock of high-powered cocktails she lurched over to Molnar and hiccoughed:

"Voulez vous—Glass Slipper—Lousey!"

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

ARE you a member of a crowd which does things which you do not like, but as your best friends are included in it you dislike to withdraw from it?

You are not in favor of the sort of "parties" which are held.

They have adopted a free and easy manner, displeasing to you.

Their kind of stories told in a mixed crowd are a bit too shady for you.

Somehow you don't feel just right after you have taken part in such a gathering.

Sometimes you wonder if your friends have reached a point where they have less interest in the finer things than you have or whether you have instead become a back number.

You are surprised that certain ones seem to enjoy changed conditions.

Thinking back only a short time you realize that a great change has come over many of your friends.

While they seem to think as much of you as ever, you do know that they seem not to seek your society as often as they did in the past.

You wonder what course to take—the one your better nature suggests or "follow the crowd."

This is a question you will have to answer for yourself, no one can do it for you.
